Of moths... ...and mouths

Alan McEwen photos

Moths were a big topic in Carmel this week. Gypsy moths from Connecticut, that is. Carmel forestry crewman Larry Lowry sprayed Sevin, an insecticide, on trees near Torres and Second streets (above). Periodic inspections will determine if more spraying is needed. On the left is a male Gypsy moth (top) and a female. More pictures and stories about moths are on Pages 6 and 7. Hillary Calhoun, 15 months (below) gets her mouth wiped with an assist from Joe Parrish. They were at Bay School Saturday, May 10. To find out more about their activities, turn to Page 8.

'Carmelitis'

Dear Editor:

We enjoy your Carmel Pine Cone so much that we don't know how we missed renewing our yearly subscription. We suspect it came due when we were in Carmel-by-the-Sea — a lovely place. Now we suffer from "Carmelitis" and must renew!

Their candidate

Dear Editor:

We support Jim O'Brien for supervisor of the 5th District.

Today all levels of government are faced with drastically curtailed revenues to provide even the most basic public services. We need a supervisor with the financial expertise of Jim O'Brien to insure maximum cost benefit efficiency from our beleaguered county budget.

Flying lessons

Dear Editor:

President Carter told us many times to tighten our energy belts.

But FAA Administrator Langhorne M. Bond didn't follow his advice when he told his staff to take flying lessons. Such generous advice puts an extra load on the taxpayers and adds to Bond's problem of what to do with too many pilots.

Brave budget-cutters chase after easy targets like the helpless poor who are without funds for political contributions. These noble slicers voice shame at federal waste, but their knives remain sheathed when it's trimming time for the FAA. As long as the FAA escapes the clippers, Bond's big fleet of airplanes will grow and Monterey's curfew will be ignored.

Lack of incentives to cut and save is reflected in FAA's training requirements. Fliers, including Army, Navy, Marine, Air Force and Coast Guard, circle populous Monterey practicing instrument approaches despite simulated training being superior to the "real thing."

"Live" training endangers the traveling public, bugs the taxpayers, upsets those living under flying classrooms and wastes fuel. Waste here and there adds up, forcing Carter to ask Congress for more tattered dollars to cover zooming fuel costs.

In the "good old days," weasel words like "necessity" and "convenience" could be used to justify waste, but we know better now! Effective energy frugality means dilatory Bond finally listens to Jimmy Carter and steps forward as your air conserver.

A friend is gone

Dear Editor:

Walter, the 8-year-old harlequin Great Dane, passed away in his sleep last week.

Walter will be remembered in the hearts of all who knew him.

Goodbye old friend.
Rest in peace.

A forecast

Dear Editor:

Your timely editorial on Carmel's present city revenue and expenditure might usefully be expanded to forecast the future.

From 1975-76 to 1979-80, Carmel's operating expenditures (excluding capital improvements and library) rose by about 10 percent per annum to $2.51 million.

This includes police, fire, public works, forestry, planning and building.

Total operating expenditures in '79-80 reached $3.19 million.

Total revenue was substantially higher: $4.26 million in '78-79 increased 15 percent to $4.93 million in '79-80. Property tax yield was only $150,000. Debt service required only $35,000.

Carmel's total revenues increased, ususally, about 15 percent per annum.

The White House Management and Budget Office and the state analyst advise me that they are assuming, respectively, 1980 inflation rates of 13.3 percent and 14.1 percent. With 15 percent growth and 15 percent inflation, Carmel's total revenues may well exceed $10 million by 1982-83.

Valley regional park

Dear Editor:

In my opinion the time has come to rename Carmel Valley's regional park.

The land which originally comprised the park had been owned by two long-time valley residents. Garland bought it, held it for a few years and sold the land, for a fine price, to the county. Now, large blocks of land are to be given or leased to the park by two more valley residents.

In view of this history, isn't it more logical to name our park after our valley than for a Los Angeles land speculator?

Let's hear from all who agree that the park should be called Carmel Valley Regional Park.

Supports O'Brien

Dear Editor:

Once in a while we voters have an opportunity to cast a positive vote, rather than simply registering a negative protest. Such is the case on June 3 in the Fifth District supervisorial race.

Jim O'Brien is the one candidate who can bring to the Board of Supervisors a background of many years in top financial management, just at the time our country most needs financial management. Perhaps never before in the history of Monterey County have we so badly needed competent economic judgment at the policy-making level. And no candidate for the board in recent years has been as qualified to contribute this guidance as Jim O'Brien.

Equally important to residents of the Fifth District is sensitivity to the environment. During its next term, the Board of Supervisors will have to deal further with the prospect of untimely development in Carmel Valley. Jim O'Brien offers that rare combination of financial competence and extreme consciousness of environmental issues. He will demand that the board take strong, sound positions to protect our environment. No one, on or off the board, will ever run roughshod over Jim O'Brien.

Your vote to elect Jim O'Brien Fifth District supervisor June 3 will assure our area of qualified representation on the county Board of Supervisors; representation which will protect your tax dollars and at the same time preserve the landscape of our beautiful district.

Feeling his oats

By AL EISNER

CARMEL'S NEW MAYOR, Barney Laiolo, has sent a charge of energy through City Hall, affecting his fellow councilmen and the city staff.

Presiding at his first meeting a couple of weeks ago, he made a couple of symbolic gestures to establish his authority. Later, he began to reveal specific elements of his program to partly restructure city government (by splitting the Planning Commission into two bodies, for example.)

In addition, he has made several off-the-cuff remarks that have already ruffled the feathers of several people involved in local government. In his zeal to get things moving after four years of dissension and virtual paralysis, Barney is plunging boldly ahead into uncharted waters.

He has to reckon with his own City Council of course. As Carmel's first elected mayor, Barney assumes he is the boss. Is he really? Or, to put it another way, should he be?

At Monday night's council meeting, it became clear that at least two members of the lawmaking body were not going to be steamrollered into going along with one of Barney's notions — elimination of salaries for councilmen. The matter was turned over to the city attorney when it became apparent that there might be some legal problems due to a possible new state law dealing with the subject.

Impatient with his council, Barney said brusquely: "Okay, then, let's table this." The surprising thing, of course, was that the council meekly went along. Nobody stopped to note that a motion to table any issue has to be made and then voted on. The city clerk could have pointed this out, but backed off, perhaps, because Barney was feeling his oats.

WHEN THE VOTERS decided last November that the mayor of Carmel should be elected directly rather than appointed by his fellow councilmen, they did not grant the mayor any extra powers. As far as I can tell, Barney is just another member of the council, with no additional powers except to make appointments to the various city boards and commissions (with the consent of his council); to preside over meetings of the council; and to be the spokesman for the city.

He cannot make laws by himself. He cannot tell any city employee to "do this" or "not to do this." As a successful retired businessman, Barney has the time and the expertise to bring to the job. He certainly has the sentimental support of a large portion of the business and residential community. He has a lot of friends, too. Barney is leaning on this support to push his programs through quickly — perhaps because he is already counting down the months remaining in his 24-month term.

His predecessor, Gunnar Norberg, failed to accomplish many of his long-sought programs during his term of office mainly because of his style of governing.

I hope Barney doesn't fall into the same trap.

WHEN I PUCKISHLY suggested a couple of weeks ago that the city ought to give a $50 rebate to every resident of Carmel out of the bulging city surplus in the already bloated city treasury, I didn't know that revenues from motel taxes were rising sharply.

City Administrator Doug Peterson just told me that the 8 percent hostelry tax will reap an estimated $900,000 harvest for the city. His estimate for the current fiscal year was $800,000. That means the city will add still another $100,000 to its surplus.

Recession? Not in Carmel, folks!

Dr. Herrick named to library board

MAYOR BARNEY LAIOLO appointed Dr. Francis Herrick to the board of directors of Harrison Memorial Library during the first regular meeting of the Carmel City Council, May 5.

It was Laiolo's first appointment to a city commission since taking office, as well as his first City Council meeting as presiding officer since his election April 8.

The council approved a recommendation by City Administrator Doug Peterson to form a fire training Joint Powers agency with the Monterey and Mid-Valley fire districts. It will enable the three fire districts to share firefighting equipment and training facilities.

A mobile training "tower" that will provide training for firefighters under controlled conditions was of interest to the Council in approving the recommendation.

Carmel has committed $20,000 toward the purchase of the tower, which will be shared by all parties in the Joint Powers agreement.

Cost of the tower and related training equipment may exceed $100,000.

Loss of life and injuries have resulted from a lack of proper training of volunteer firefighters, according to fire officials in the three fire districts.

Also on the May 5 agenda was an appeal by Guy's Restaurant, on Dolores between Seventh and Eighth, of a Planning Commission Design and Review Board ruling denying two signs for an interior showcase.

The council accepted a resolution establishing adjusted terms of office for forestry commissioners; accepted a bid of $7,922 from Guyer Construction Co., Inc. of Monterey for the construction of a deck/porch for Forest Theater; accepted the bid of $9,560 from Alarmex of Marina for the installation of fire alarms in public structures; approved a resolution seeking state funds for Forest Hill Park, and approved a request by Natasha Martell to include the instruction of acting as a home occupation.

A proposal by Councilman Mike Brown to modify current parking permit standards so alien residents of Carmel might enjoy the same parking privileges that other residents enjoy was denied by the council.

Wins beauty pageant

Lisa Stephan of Carmel was named 1980 "Maid of Monterey County" in a beauty pageant Saturday, May 10, at the Salinas Valley Fair in King City, She competed with eight other contestants from King City and Salinas, and was judged on personality, poise and appearance. She modeled a formal gown, a swimsuit and a "fun costume." She is now eligible to compete for the title of "Maid of California" in Sacramento this summer. Miss Stephan is the daughter of Jaro Stephan of Carmel and Gloria Stephan of Fairfax. She won $700 for the title and also the "Miss Congeniality" title.

Will council buy nursery?

The Carmel City Council will consider acquiring Picadilly Nursery, on Dolores between Seventh and Ocean, at a special meeting at 5 p.m. Wednesday, May 21.

The city has leased the property for $1,000 a month since August. The lease expires July 31.

The property has been subleased to Stephano Cacace for $600 a month since Sept. 11. That lease also expires July 31.

Other administrative matters may be included on the agenda for the special meeting.

During the November 1979 special statewide elections, the proposed purchase of the property by the city was placed on the ballot as an advisory to the City Council.

In that election, 806 (56.2 percent of those voting) Carmel residents voted in favor of buying the nursery property at a fair market value price or, if necessary, to acquire it through eminent domain.

Voting no on the issue were 637, or 43.8 percent.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

Guard your tongue

By the REV. LARRY FARRELL

Once upon a time Papa Bear growled, "Somebody has eaten my porridge." Baby Bear growled, "Somebody has eaten my porridge." Mama Bear says, "Will you two characters stop growling. I haven't even cooked your porridge yet."

The moral of this fable is "don't start growling until you check the facts."

O Lord, help us to bite our tongues remembering the advice King Solomon gave us: "He who guards his tongue keeps himself from trouble."

If we sow thistles we should not be surprised if we don't harvest violets. If we kick up a storm we cannot expect calm sailing.

Finally, that cynical and pathetic Anglo Irishman Oscar Wilde tells us, "Always forgive your enemies. Nothing annoys them so much."

Perhaps if we keep our mouths shut we'll annoy them even more.

View through a Grapestake Fence

FUNNY, I ALWAYS thought that "beauty" and "brawn" were separate descriptions, like what's-her-name and that big ape.

Seems nowadays those two words have new and totally different meanings. They now both mean girls!

Doubt me? Then next year go to Sunset Center for the apparently annual Body Building Contest, which now boasts(?) lady contenders. The watching of girls in bathing suits certainly is taking on new meaning.

When a body-building lady lists her measurements, they are now apt to mean bicep, abdomen and thigh.

Gee, when I give a girl a hug, the last thing I want to be aware of is her bulging biceps.

•

FOIBLES are human, and humans have foibles.

Now that our new council has had its first meeting, we are into a new era of foibles. Big Daddy Barney is off and running, with game plan in hand. Shades of Coach Bear Bryant.

•

THE GUYS around town have been making "Ship's Pool" bets on just how long it would take before Mayor Barney has to gavel down the "boys" for a "cooling off" period.

The action has been pretty active, and I'm not saying what number I drew, but you know something? I have a feeling it isn't going to happen — at all!

•

THE ONLY THING no one has mentioned yet is who orders a cooling off period when Barney gets mad.

SOOOOOO — we should have two divisions of a Planning Commission?

It is worth thinking about — there are some good ideas here and I think it is worth a complete study. Charges are that it could be a power play by Barney. I suppose that could be a possibility, but it could be more of a really constructive, productive plan, which would get real action on our General Plan, action which is so desperately needed.

•

TALK ABOUT environmental impact!

One item of vital importance is happening May 22.

Do you want to have a two-acre parking field right next to the Carmelite Monastery? This is the plan that has the approval and push of the head of the state Parks Department in Monterey, Mr. Frincke, and he will push this through, if he can, at that May 22 meeting at the Middle School.

Three guesses as to what's next — toilets, hot dog stands, permanent police station (mandatory, I should think), and we have a view of two full acres of macadam with more than 200 recreational vehicles, trucks, etc. parked there.

•

IF IT'S REALLY NECESSARY for the "public" to have such open "access to Big Sur," why isn't the access cut through from King City, with the road straight through from there?

I could think of a lot of heads I'd use as pile-drivers to go through those mountains!

•

ONE THING I really did like was the Pledge of Allegiance at the start of the council meeting, and I sort of like the absence of roll call, with the "ayes" and "nays" being verbal.

It's a big more relaxed and still proper procedure.

•

WELL, it wasn't 10 p.m., but a bit after 11 when we all got out.

It takes time to shake old habits.

Carmel's common

When the sun does manage to peek out, Carmel's Devendorf Park gets a lot of visitors. There are walkers, lunchers, sunbathers and people feeding the birds.

The Mayor's report:

I wish to thank all the people who were in attendance at my first meeting. It's a pleasure to have citizen interest and involvement.

To date, it's been difficult to keep you informed of items coming up for discussion due to the time limit of the due date for the Pine Cone. We'll try to work something out.

I have been doing considerable work on the changes which I hope will happen soon with regard to the Planning Commission.

There are now forms at City Hall for applications for interested persons wishing to serve on commissions. I would appreciate having these completed so we may file them for future reference.

I toured the Forest Hill Park with Doug Peterson and Greg D'Ambrosio the other day. It was "School Day." By that I mean that several classes were instructed by Greg, one at a time. I have to compliment Greg on a very fine presentation to the children. He talked to them about erosion, litter, safety and stressed it was their park as well as everyone else's and how they should take care of it and enjoy it. It is very close to completion, and I do hope you will all stop by and see the fine work done there.

If you haven't noticed the new overhang and face lift on the Leidig Building at San Carlos and Ocean, you should take a good look. The Leidigs are to be congratulated for a very fine job of upgrading and still maintaining the Carmel tradition. Good work Leidigs — hope some of the other owners will follow suit.

Love those umbrellas.

The Village:

Carmel's Local Coastal Program advances

By BOB BATES

CARMEL IS AHEAD of most California communities affected by the Coastal Commission Act in developing a Local Coastal Program (LCP) that will be acceptable to regional and state coastal commissions, according to City Administrator Doug Peterson.

In spite of the rejection of Carmel's Land Use Plan portion of the Local Coastal Program by the Regional Coastal Commission April 14 in Santa Cruz, Peterson said he is comfortable with progress Carmel is making toward meeting deadlines mandated by the state in submitting an acceptable LCP.

Initial deadlines are set for January 1981, he said.

At issue is the four-parcel beachfront property owned by Jack Patterson of Carmel in the dunes area off San Antonio and Ocean. It has 72,000 sq. ft.

Patterson, at the May 12 City Council meeting opposed conditions imposed by the Regional Coastal Commission on the property. He has been trying to develop it since 1965.

Basically, the commission wants half the property for public use, meaning much of it cannot be developed.

"I just don't think it is right to take a man's property from him," Mayor Barney Laiolo told fellow councilmen.

"We have enough beach area as it is. I don't see why we have to have more."

William van Becham, a staff member of the Regional Coastal Commission, responded, "We still feel that the property, especially the lower western portion, is a natural extension of the beach and would prefer that it be preserved as an open space."

Patterson's attorney, Myron Etienne of Salinas, argued that the property does not meet specifications for a natural extension of the beach area, the view afforded from Point Lobos to Pebble Beach from the property is not accessible to the public, but only to individual property (should houses be built on the property) and has no relationship to the city-owned dunes that front the beach, next to the Patterson property.

"Is the damage to this man (Patterson) worth the public good to be gained by taking his property from him?" Etienne asked the council.

•

COUNCILMAN MIKE BROWN proposed that the Land Use Plan portion of the Local Coastal Program be divided into two parts, one dealing with the Patterson property exclusively, the other dealing with portions of the plan the coastal commission found no fault with during April 14 certification hearings in Santa Cruz.

Laiolo and Councilman Howard Brunn objected to that proposal.

"What you would end up with are two separate plans that are not as strong individually as a single plan would be," Laiolo said.

"It should be presented as one plan," Brunn echoed.

"At this point the city has three primary alternatives," City Administrator Peterson told the council. "We can resubmit the Land Use Plan to the regional commission in a modified form; appeal the decision directly to the State Coastal Commission, or take court action contending that the local plan meets all of the conditions of the Coastal Act and that the regional commission has the mandatory duty to approve the city's plan."

"We should give Mr. Patterson some sort of deadline," Brunn argued. "Instead of just telling him that we would like to buy his property sometime, we should get back to him within 30 days and either make him an offer or tell him we aren't interested.

"This condition mandated by the Regional Coastal Commission is ridiculous," Brunn said.

"The city isn't in the position to buy it (the Patterson property) unless some angel comes along and gives us $1 million.

"I think we should set a time limit so that Mr. Patterson won't be left hanging with these continual delays."

An alternative suggested by Peterson was redrawing the property lines so building would be easier.

Patterson said he would work with the Planning Commission to resolve the matter.

The Land Use Plan was returned to the Planning Commission for further consideration, with the stipulation the commission report back to Peterson within 30 days.

Gasoline supply may dwindle here

A FRUIT STAND called Peaches and Cream may replace a service station in downtown Carmel unless the city fathers can persuade someone to continue pumping gas there.

The closing of Marcoli Arco station, Seventh and San Carlos, due to the May 14 retirement of owner Charles Marcoli, may mean gasoline allocated for public consumption in Carmel will be lost.

With a dwindling number of stations in the city (there are now four), a gas crunch may result in a city which depends heavily on the tourist trade.

City Administrator Doug Peterson said during the regular meeting of the city council Monday, May 12, "There is a high level of interest in keeping the gasoline allocation on that property."

Although the allocation from Arco remains at the station for one year after a property changes hands, Arco is entitled to remove its equipment within 30 days of the closing of the station.

"We should move on this very, very soon," Mayor Barney Laiolo said.

"I have talked to the agents of the people interested in the property, and they are willing to continue operation of the site as an Arco station, perhaps in conjunction with the fruit stand," Peterson said.

"In conversations I have had with the landlord, he is willing to continue the operation of the gas station, but there are some minor problems to be worked out.

"I haven't received definitive word from Arco, either," Peterson said.

Councilman Frank Lloyd expressed concern that gasoline allocations in Carmel might be in jeopardy.

"With the closing of this station and the rumored closing of at least one other station in Carmel, that will leave us with only four service stations in a city that is dependent on the tourist business," Lloyd said.

Letters will be sent to all interested parties to try to keep the Arco station where it is, Peterson told the council.

Mayor reappoints two planning commissioners

CARMEL PLANNING COMMISSION Chairman Robert Stephenson and Commissioner John Logan have both expressed pleasure at being reappointed to four-year-terms by Mayor Barney Laiolo during the regular meeting of the City Council, Monday, May 12.

"I have enjoyed the last four years and am looking forward to the next four years working for the city," Stephenson said.

Asked if he has any aspirations for his coming term of office, Stephenson touched on a number of items.

"I am in favor of dividing the Planning Commission up in some manner to facilitate long-range planning," he said.

"Capt. Wright (Commissioner James Wright) proposed that to me initially before the mayor made his own proposal (during the May 5 council meeting), and I think it is a good idea."

"I am not sure how to do that as yet," he added, "but it is something we will be working on."

"I am still in favor of the transient rental ordinance and am hopeful that we will get that passed by the City Council in coming months," Stephenson said.

"Parking and one-way streets is something else that will be looked at again," he added.

Stephenson was originally appointed to the commission by Mayor Eugene Hammond in 1976 and became chairman of the commission in 1978.

•

LOGAN said, "I feel my most valuable contribution to the city is that I serve on two water management committees.

"That is my field. I am a hydrologist.

"I hope to be reappointed to those commissions."

Logan was appointed to the Planning Commission in February 1978 by former Mayor Gunnar Norberg to fill the unexpired term of Leslie Gross, who was elected to the City Council.

Law may not allow councilmen to work for free

CARMEL CITY ATTORNEY George Brehmer burned the midnight oil Monday, May 12, drafting a memo to the city council concerning alternatives open to councilmen in refusing to accept pay for themselves.

"I was up until past 2 a.m. working on the memo," Brehmer said, "and it should shed some light on the matter, although there are still some uncertainties involved.

"I haven't presented the memo to the council, as yet, and so I don't feel it would be prudent to discuss it with the press."

"Generally speaking," Brehmer said, "I can tell you that at first blush, a section of the government (state) code may sound pretty straight-forward.

"In my opinion, however, codes must be interpreted in context, provision by provision, sentence by sentence."

Brehmer was referring to a section of the State Code which prevents government bodies from increasing salaries.

The same provision may prevent the council from refusing pay for public service.

The council voted 3-2, May 5, to rescind an ordinance passed by the previous council in June 1979 that established salaries of $150 a month for council members and $200 a month for the mayor.

Councilman Frank Lloyd and Councilwoman Helen Arnold voted against rescinding the ordinance.

A second reading of any ordinance is necessary before it becomes law, however, and the council voted to continue until its next meeting in June final action on the pay issue, contingent upon Brehmer's report.

"We have never accepted it (pay) before," Mayor Barney Laiolo said. "There is no reason we should start now."

Discussion on the ordinance concerned whether council pay would be an incentive for women, retired or low-income people to run for public office.

Mexican restaurant is still pushing for full liquor license

HACIENDA RESTAURANT owner Steve McComb declined comment after his appearance before the Carmel City Council, Monday, May 12, in yet another attempt to obtain a full liquor license for his Mexican restaurant on Dolores and Fifth.

"I would just rather wait until the council makes a final decision before I say anything," McComb said.

McComb and his lawyer, Rodney Kleman, both addressed the council.

Although the matter was not on the agenda, McComb and Kleman were present to urge the council to consider a letter Kleman gave City Attorney George Brehmer during the May 5 council meeting. It outlined arguments for granting a full liquor license for the Hacienda.

"I haven't had time to digest the letter in its entirety," Brehmer said, "and therefore cannot advise the city staff concerning the legalities involved. I should be able to do so within the week."

McComb said he plans a vacation the first week in June when the next regular meeting of the council will be held, and asked if the matter might be taken up before then.

"I have investors anxiously awaiting the council's decision on this," McComb said.

"I am speaking to you against the advice of my attorney," McComb added. "I cannot understand why I am being denied full use of my business without compensation from the city."

'I cannot understand why I am being denied full use of my business without compensation from the city.'

"Maybe I can loosen up your thinking," Mayor Barney Laiolo said. "The zoning in your location doesn't qualify you for a full liquor license."

McComb argued that a business 300 feet away from his had closed and a liquor license there is for sale.

"I see no reason why I should not be able to purchase that liquor license," he said.

City records indicate that when McComb first applied for a business license for the restaurant, in May 1978, he agreed to sell only beer and wine in conjunction with his food service and would not apply for a full liquor license.

"I just would rather not make any public statement about that at this time," McComb said.

Consideration of McComb's request will be on the May 21 agenda of a special meeting of the council at 5 p.m.

Tom Redfern, a broker, and his wife, Sue, a realtor associate, are the principals in Tom Redfern and Associates.

Already established in Pacific Grove, they opened an office in Carmel May 1. It is above De Smets' Bakery on Ocean, between Lincoln and Dolores.

Redfern's specialties are investment income property and tax-deferred exchanges of income property. His wife, a teacher 10 years before she joined her husband in real estate, specializes in residential sales.

The new office is an expansion of their present business to acquire more space and set apart the investment activities. The office itself is special too; Redfern describes it as "very pleasant, done over in Victorian turn-of-the-century style."

The couple and their son, Greg, 16, a student at Carmel High, moved to the Peninsula four years ago. They had been living in Southern California and, once having discovered the Peninsula, became convinced business trips to the southland once or twice a year would be enough.

Redfern graduated from UCLA with a degree in business administration and did graduate work in business and real estate. He was an appraiser for six years and in real estate sales for eight.

The Redferns live "down the coast." Mrs. Redfern is particularly interested in Tor House, and once the new office is firmly established, both she and her husband hope to have more time to give the Jeffers' landmark and other community activities.

KOLONAKI
George Georgiou

George Georgiou is a San Franciscan who decided that the special kinds of clothes he designs and manufactures for women would appeal to Carmel residents and visitors. Therefore: Kolonaki, on the Lower Level of Carmel Plaza.

All Georgiou's clothes are of natural fibers such as cotton and wool. They feature hand crocheting and hand embroidery. Natural crinkle cotton and gauze separates in seasonless styles are typical. As Georgiou describes them: "They are for casual wear and they are feminine at the same time."

The literal meaning of the Greek word "Kolonaki" is "small column." It is also the name of an excellent residential area in Athens. Georgiou is from Cyprus, where many of the garments are still produced in his family's factory.

Kolonaki's owner has lived in San Francisco for 16 years. He didn't set out to be a designer-manufacturer. After studying at American University in Beirut, he headed west to take degrees in economics and mathematics at the University of San Francisco. He became vice president and head of the computer department of a prominent San Francisco investment firm. In 1974, while still with that firm, he bought his first store. He now has several in San Francisco and one in Sausalito; Carmel is his sixth, one in Las Vegas will be the seventh.

Georgiou sent Kim Dorsey, an experienced manager in San Francisco, to get his newest store under way. Eventually he plans to employ only local people to manage and staff Kolonaki in Carmel.

Georgiou said he emphasizes quality control, and believes the secret of his expanding business is that there is a high correlation between what he likes and what sells.

FAZZINI REALTY
Gabriel and Karen Fazzini, brokers

Gabriel and Karen Fazzini met in real estate school and soon decided to become marital partners.

Becoming business partners took a little longer, but on March 28, Fazzini Realty opened.

The new company — in Bonnymead Court on Lincoln, south of Ocean — wants to be versatile. At present, the Fazzinis handle residential and commercial sales and exchanges. They plan to expand into rentals, believing they are one of Carmel's great needs.

Fazzini describes himself as "almost a native" of Carmel. He came here from Venice, Italy, in 1959. After years of traveling for the merchant marine, he was attracted to Carmel as a very cosmopolitan town. He sees himself as something of a local historian, having worked for men from whom he could learn much about his chosen home . . . . S.F.B. Morse in Pebble Beach and Bud Allen of the La Playa Hotel among them. For a time he had his own small restaurant here. But it was real estate that proved to be his lasting interest.

Mrs. Fazzini is "almost a native Californian," having come from Michigan as an infant. She lived in San Diego and Alameda, but chose real estate school in Monterey because of her appreciation for what this area offers. As it turned out, that choice led to the choice of a lifetime partner and a permanent home.

The Fazzinis live on 15th street in Carmel. In past years they have particularly enjoyed playing volleyball on the beach. Now, there isn't much time for that, but the beach — one of the things that attracted them to this area — is still their favorite place for walks and relaxation.

GYPSY MOTHS:

Pests come to Carmel in furniture

By BOB BATES

GYPSY MOTHS, which have been detected in Carmel, infested the town of Medford, Mass., during the 1890s.

They stripped trees and covered streets and houses. They multiplied in such great numbers that residents became alarmed.

City, state and county agriculture and forestry experts are treating the presence of the Gypsy moth in Carmel seriously. A concerted effort to combat it began Saturday. Carmel wants to get the pest before it becomes entrenched in the 35,000 trees that comprise the urban forest here, according to City Forester Greg D'Ambrosio.

An area near a Torres Street home where egg and newly-hatched larvae of the Gypsy moth were discovered last week was sprayed with insecticide Thursday.

The moths, which came here from New England in a load of furniture delivered to a home on Torres Street, Tuesday, May 6, are a serious threat to trees in all of California, D'Ambrosio said.

The county agriculture department was alerted by authorities in New England, — through an agreement with states in the East where the moths are known to flourish — that a load of furniture was being moved to Carmel.

Egg masses were discovered in a doll house and a wheel barrow that were part of that furniture, D'Ambrosio said.

"Crawlers," larvae from the eggs, were found in foliage near the doll house and wheel barrow, which were left outside, D'Ambrosio said.

"When the larvae are at this stage, they eject a silk net that, in a high wind, is capable of carrying the insect as far as a mile," he said, "spreading the infestation to other areas."

"This is the most critical stage in the development of the caterpillar," he said.

•

THE CATERPILLARS ARE readily identified by a series of five blue spots beginning at the back of the head, followed by six red spots on the back, D'Ambrosio said.

It is about a quarter of an inch long and has a hairy black body with blond protrusions.

D'Ambrosio met with state and county agriculture advisers to plan how to control the pest.

They decided to spray on Torres between First and Second streets.

The primary source of food for the Gypsy moth is the oak, D'Ambrosio said. But when oak trees are not available, it will attack Monterey pines and redwood.

Oaks can withstand two or three defoliations before they die, but redwood, Monterey pine and any other type of pine dies once it is defoliated, D'Ambrosio said.

San Jose had an infestation of Gypsy moths that took three years to control, D'Ambrosio said.

"We are concerned about the possibility of that happening in Carmel," he added.

After the spraying on Torres Street, D'Ambrosio said traps will be set by the state and county agriculture departments within a mile radius of the home, using the female moth's sexual attractant.

If no male adults are found within a mile of the traps, we will feel the threat of infestaton has passed," D'Ambrosio said.

•

THE GYPSY moth was imported to the United States in the 1870s by an entomologist in Massachusetts who was interested in developing it as a potential source of silk.

When some of the moths escaped, the entomologist reported that to authorities because he knew the Gypsy moth had been a problem in Europe.

Nothing was done, and in 12 years, residents of Medford, Mass. were inundated.

Adult Gypsy moths are rather large. The wingspan of the female is about two inches. The male is dark brown and the female almost white, with wavy blackish markings across the forewings.

Eggs are deposited on branches, buildings and other places in masses of 600 or more, and are covered with a dense mass of tan or buff-colored hairs.

The individual eggs are pellet-like and range in color from brown to black.

San Jose had an infestation of Gypsy moths that took three years to bring under control.

The larvae hatch from early April to late May. The tiny larva often remains on the egg mass for several days before climbing the tree to start feeding.

It then spins a silken thread, suspends itself from a leaf and is swayed gently back and forth in a light breeze.

If the wind velocity is great enough, the larva may be carried for several hundred yards in woods, or for several miles in open terrain.

Residents of Carmel and surrounding areas are urged to contact D'Ambrosio at the forester's office, or the county Department of Agriculture if larvae or Gypsy moths are found.

"We are willing to look at any insect people bring us," D'Ambrosio said.

Insecticide sprayed in Carmel

Charles D. Radford, agricultural biologist for the county Department of Agriculture, said 1,100 gallons of the chemical Sevin were sprayed on seven properties in Carmel Thursday, May 8 to eradicate Gypsy moth larvae.

"We feel pretty secure that we got to them in time," Radford said.

"We will be making periodic checks and will set out up to 50 traps per square mile within the city itself and a like number in a four-square-mile area surrounding Carmel.

"The traps are for the male Gypsy moth and use a female sex hormone as an attractant.

"If we don't pick up a male moth with the traps, we will feel that we eradicated all of them.

"If we do catch a male, we will take further steps to eradicate," he said.

"We moved quickly once we became aware of the arrival of the shipment in Carmel.

"It could have been very serious. The moths do all of their damage within a six-week period and can strip a forest in that amount of time."

Gypsy moths can destroy shade trees, ornamentals, shrubs and plants and fruit trees, Radford said.

"We are in the process of sending native California plants back East where a study is being conducted to see which of those plants the Gypsy moth prefers to eat, so we will know how to fight them, should they become established in California," he said.

Immediate threat has been met

THE IMMEDIATE THREAT OF infestation in Carmel by Gypsy moths seems to have been met by city, county and state agencies. Only time will tell whether the pests have been eradicated.

Weekly inspections in the area where the moths were found will continue until mid-June, according to City Forester Greg D'Ambrosio.

A pesticide, Sevin, was sprayed by city and county crews over trees and shrubs near Torres and Second streets Thursday, May 8, where egg masses and larvae were found outside a home.

"The pesticide is a poison, and like any poison is toxic if eaten," D'Ambrosio said.

"Sevin has a half potency at seven days and should be almost dissipated within two weeks."

Anyone who suspects the presence of Gypsy moths in the area may contact Greg D'Ambrosio at the Carmel forester's office, or Charles Radford, agricultural biologist with the county Department of Agriculture in Montery at 372-2624.

The moths were imported to Carmel in a shipment of furniture that was delivered here May 3 from Connecticut. The furniture had been in storage in Los Angeles or Orange County since April 10. The furniture was inspected by agents of the county Department of Agriculture, as a matter of routine, after California border police advised them of the eventual arrival of the shipment in Carmel.

The discovery of egg masses and larvae (caterpillars) in the shipment resulted in an alert by the county Department of Agriculture.

City forester sets down roots

By BOB BATES

VISIONS OF California poppies and redwood have kept Carmel City Forester Greg D'Ambrosio awake nights.

The 33-year-old D'Ambrosio often creates ideas for using the 35,000-tree urban forest he maintains.

"Ideas come to me late at night," he said, "usually just before I got to bed."

An admitted aesthetic, D'Ambrosio has a philosophy on urban forestry.

"I don't consider any tree a negative tree, if it is in its proper place. Each tree has its own character, its own texture in an urban forest.

"When you are talking about urban forestry, you must think in terms of the future," D'Ambrosio said. "The impact a particular tree is going to have in a particular space, 10. 15 or even 40 years from now."

D'Ambrosio came to Carmel 10 years ago, armed with a degree in forestry and urban planning from Southern Illinois University.

He was determined to go to work for the City Forestry Department, and "pestered" the city forester until he was hired as a workman on a forestry crew.

Six months later, the former city forester went elsewhere and D'Ambrosio took his place.

•

"I CANT'T IMAGINE that I will ever leave here," he said. "No other city I know of has made the commitment to it's urban forest that this one has."

In the decade since he became city forester, D'Ambrosio's indelible print has appeared on the face of the community.

"I drew up a sort of 10-year-plan of goals when I took this job in 1970," he said.

"We have surpassed all of those goals."

"I said at the time that I would like to see all of the parks and green spaces interconnected with wildflowers and trees.

"That has been accomplished."

D'Ambrosio is, predictably, an outdoor person.

For a reporter to interview the city forester is to accompany him on his rounds.

D'Ambrosio was primarily responsible for designing a new, "balanced" look at Forest Hill Park that will offer children and adults a place to congregate.

A shuffleboard court has been resurfaced and is separated from a children's playground by subtle undulations of grassy hills.

Some of the playground equipment at the park uses recycled logs from city surplus.

"I designed the park from the standpoint of a 10-year-old," D'Ambrosio said. "You might even say a 10-year-old designed it. I asked myself what a 10-year-old would want in a park.

"I want to be sure that the guys (forestry crew members) are given credit for their contributions in the design of the park. They have contributed ideas of their own, and have taken quite a personal interest in the development of the park.

"Skills and individual qualities have emerged during this project (among crew members) that I was completely unaware of."

The D'Ambrosio stamp of redwoods and California golden poppies extends even into this park setting.

"We have planted several redwoods here," he said.

"In time, there will be a small redwood grove and, of course, the golden poppies as well as other wildflowers."

•

MISSION TRAIL PARK, a sprawling semi-wilderness area on property once the Flanders and Doolittle estates at the south end of town, is another project D'Ambrosio developed.

Five miles of hiking trails, secluded picnicking spots and park benches exist among wildflowers, bushes and thickets, purposely planted to enhance the natural appearance of the park which attracts 100 visitors a day.

Redwood have also been planted among the hardwoods and pines in the park.

"This is a theme I have tried to employ throughout the city's urban forest," D'Ambrosio said. "Allowing Nature to take over once the planting has been done.

"I prefer something nature did to the contrived, man-made parks I have seen in other areas."

Allowing plants, especially wildflowers, to grow unrestricted also minimizes upkeep and maintenance, D'Ambrosio said.

Although Carmel is not a natural habitat for redwoods, as are other portions of Monterey and Santa Cruz counties, D'Ambrosio plants 150 to 200 redwoods a year in Carmel.

"These redwoods will never grow to be as large as those giants in other areas," he explained, "due to soil and climate conditions."

ALSO PLANNED for Mission Trail Park is an arboretum for visitors to study native plants.

The city began to develop Mission Trail Park in 1974 after acquiring the Flanders and Doolittle estates, about 35.5 acres.

Also included on the Flanders estate is a 12-room mansion, now occupied by the Carmel Art Institute.

D'Ambrosio said he has been accused of being somewhat overbearing in his approach to enforcing city policy and ordinances on the urban forest. He said that hurts him.

"I enjoy working with residents in meeting both their needs and those of the city in maintaining an urban forest," he said.

"Occasionally, I will be confronted with someone who makes an agreement with me, prior to the construction of a structure, and after the building is completed, disregards his part of the agreement.

"I have an obligation to the city to enforce the rules."

Will there be another D'Ambrosio 10-year-plan for the continued development of the Carmel urban forest?

"I never stop planning," he grinned.

"I do plan to be here for some time.

"This job has provided me with all I need as far as an occupation is concerned."

City attorney drafts law for time-sharing rentals

By BOB BATES

CARMEL CITY ATTORNEY George Brehmer may become one of the first municipal lawyers in California to tackle the complexities of drafting an ordinance to control time-sharing rental plans.

The City Council told him last week to draft an ordinance to control time-sharing.

Brehmer is looking at legislation used by Nevada in the regulation of a growing, lucrative industry that has spread widely in a few years.

Time-sharing works like this: A condominium is built in Hawaii, for instance, with 20 units for rent. Time-share buyers purchase from a week to a month of occupancy, under a long-term contract, some for 40 years. An average rental of a month, multiplied by 12, would result in 240 owners of that condominium building.

Some time-sharing plans call for exchanges throughout the world.

Two weeks in Hawaii might be traded for two weeks in Europe between time-share owners.

The complexity of the concept has many lawyers scratching their heads searching for loopholes to capture some of the tax money being avoided in time-sharing.

Carmel is no exception.

The point seems to be that a lot of temporary guests pass through Carmel who do not pay a room tax.

Motels, of course, are much more manageable for any given period of time, and taxable.

In Carmel, motel owners pay an eight-percent room tax to the city, quarterly.

The city conducts random audits throughout the year to make sure everyone is taking the tax seriously, according to City Administrator Doug Peterson.

"So far, the audits have proved that everyone is taking it seriously," Peterson said.

Taxing condominium time-sharing presents problems, such as whom the tax is levied against, since no one person holds the deed to the property.

•

STEVE CRABB, former assistant city attorney for Monterey, now of South Lake Tahoe, has recently drawn up an ordinance for that community based upon a Nevada ordinance. No other city in California seems to have a law controlling time-sharing rentals, Carmel City Attorney Brehmer said.

"I may use portions of the Nevada law as a guide in drafting an ordinance for Carmel. "I just don't know yet which direction I will be taking."

Whatever Brehmer produces for Carmel, his fellow municipal attorneys throughout California will watch to see how he approaches making new law with such potentially wide-ranging implications.

The Legend...

In 1917 fate brought together two great women of our century face to face—Dr. Nadine Payot and the fabled ballerina, Anna Pavlova. "When, I met Pavlova, I was struck by the curious difference between her face and body. Her beautiful body was still young and lissome and firm through daily exercise and lack of exposure to the elements, while her face was severely marked by age,". reported Dr. Payot. "I was fascinated by the possibility of changing all that." Dr. Payot committed herself to the art and science of helping women protect their skin from moisture loss and protect their facial muscles from premature deterioration by proper massage and exercise. Her methods and preparations were so successful that the rich, the beautiful and the renowned flocked to the "Payot Institut de Beaute", located at the historical mansion of the Countess of Castiglione, where Napoleon III had once climbed incognito up the spiraling staircase to rejoin the Countess. Almost 60 years of success in more than 50 countries have proven the effectiveness of Payot.

Intersection could speed urbanization in Valley

By STEVE HELLMAN

PLANS TO IMPROVE THE intersection of Carmel Valley and Robinson Canyon roads have thrown Monterey County officials into a quandary.

The Board of Supervisors indicated last week it did not want an "urban-type" intersection, although considerable urban development is planned in the area.

The intersection is on a curve, with a downhill approach from the east, and traffic merging from the west from Mid-Valley Shopping Center. There is only a stop sign on Robinson Canyon Road.

Developers of Carmel Valley Ranch are being required by the county to improve the intersection and pay the full cost. The development, off Robinson Canyon Road, envisions 500 condominiums, a 100-unit hotel and golf course.

Creegan & D'Angelo, engineers for the developer, submitted a study of four alternatives last week, including an underpass and a traffic signal. The traffic signal and widening of Carmel Valley Road to five lanes is the alternative preferred by the engineers.

The supervisors, however, declared that a traffic signal was out of the question. It would break a tradition in the Valley against signals, they noted. More importantly, it would impede traffic on Carmel Valley Road and cause rear-end collisions, according to the county Public Works Department.

AN UNDERPASS WAS rejected by supervisors, who felt it would scar the hillside and represent an urban solution.

A third alternative, that would extend Center Street from the shopping center to Robinson Canyon Road, was opposed by the Public Works Department and property owners. The property owners also expressed strong opposition to an underpass, an intersection with traffic signals, or any solution that would require acquisition of private land, large landfills, removal of some businesses near the intersection and cuts into the hillside.

The county's quandary is alleviated somewhat because the developer of Carmel Valley Ranch is required to pay for the new intersection.

A condition of the use permit for the first 140 condominiums requires the developer to provide a plan and money for the intersection within two years of filing the final map for the 140 units. The map is expected to be filed this summer, making July 1982 the deadline for the contribution of funds.

by the 203-lot Rancho Buena Vista subdivision proposed on Robinson Canyon Road, and future development on the 26,000-acre San Carlos Ranch that is reached by the road.

Orrett said the only suitable alternative was an underpass.

The Center Street extension, he said, would create another intersection. "It is also somewhat removed from the subdivider's condition that it be the Robinson Canyon intersection that is improved," he said.

A traffic signal appears to be the simplest solution, he said, but, "There's things here that do not meet the eye."

That solution would require widening Carmel Valley Road from two to five lanes. If it were widened on the north side, cuts would have to be made into the hill. If done on the south side, it would require raising the edge of the road, and a large landfill.

"A small mountain would have to be moved in to raise the grade of Robinson Canyon Road," he said. The landfill might force the removal of the Farm Center, adjacent the intersection.

•

A SINGLE-LANE UNDERPASS for westbound, left-turn traffic from Robinson Canyon Road would not impede traffic on Carmel Valley Road, Orrett said. "An underpass would require a lot of earthwork, but it might be done without too large a cut into the hillside." Carmel Valley Road would remain two lanes, with an underpass, he added.

Orrett ruled out the fourth alternative, a diamond-style intersection that is standard for freeway interchanges. He concluded the smaller underpass is adequate.

"I will not support (traffic signals on) Carmel Valley Road," Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck said. She said the underpass may not be necessary if a solution can be found with the Center Street extension. She called for more details before she makes a decision.

Supervisor Michal Moore opposed signals, saying "I am unalterably opposed to a grade separation. It will rip into the hillside." He asked public works to determine if the existing intersection could accommodate the traffic with minor modifications. He also favored the Center Street extension.

Supervisor Sam Farr said, "A signal is a fallback to the '70s. We don't need them. We seem to have done fine in Carmel Valley without them."

An underpass, Farr insisted, "Would also go against the rural character of the Valley. I don't think any urban solution is correct."

Dusan Petrovic was the only supervisor to support an underpass. He indicated it would be suitable as long as it did not marr the hillside. Supervisor Kenneth Blohm was quiet on the whole matter.

Cost of the intersection was also debated at last week's meeting.

The Public Works Department estimated a signal (including road work) would cost $200,000, an underpass $800,000.

Representatives of Creegan & D'Angelo insisted a signal would cost $400,000. Arguing against an underpass, they said it would cost as much as $1.2 million.

Supervisors agreed more details were needed before a decision could be made. They directed the Public Works Department to consider an alternative that would both preserve the rural character of the Valley and also accommodate more traffic. Supervisors asked for a report within two months. Creegan & D'Angelo was asked to provide plans for the alternatives.

A public hearing will be scheduled to consider the plans before a final decision is made.

Public works officials maintained an urban intersection cannot be avoided.

Mo Orrett, supervising civil engineer for the county, told supervisors the intersection will be the busiest in the Valley after Carmel Valley Ranch is completed. He said traffic would be increased sevenfold.

Traffic through the intersection could be further increased

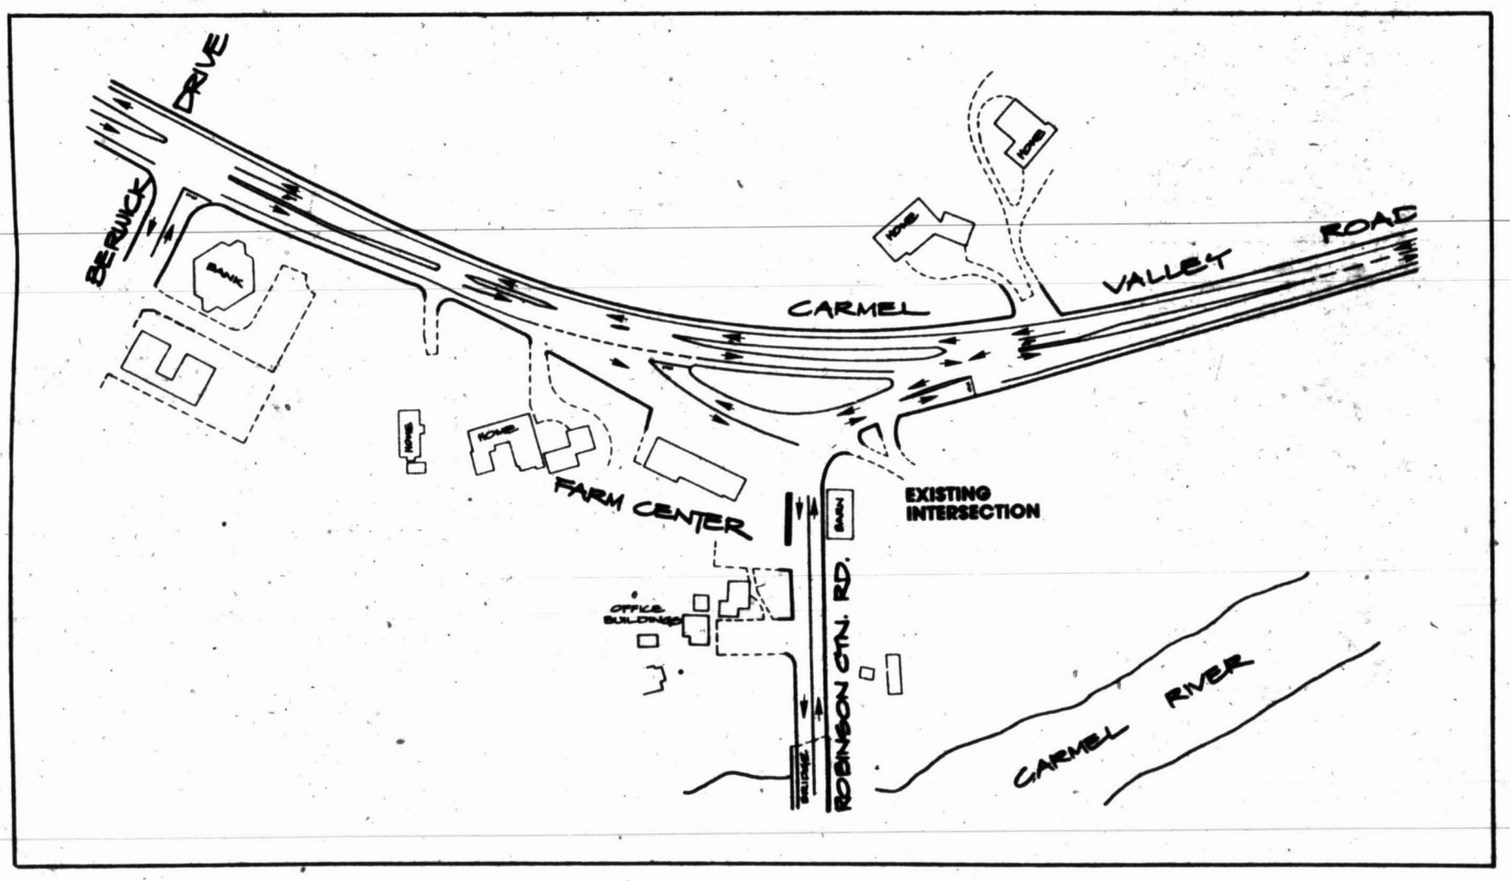
'What they want is a rural solution to an urban situation. How we'll do that I cannot conceive.'

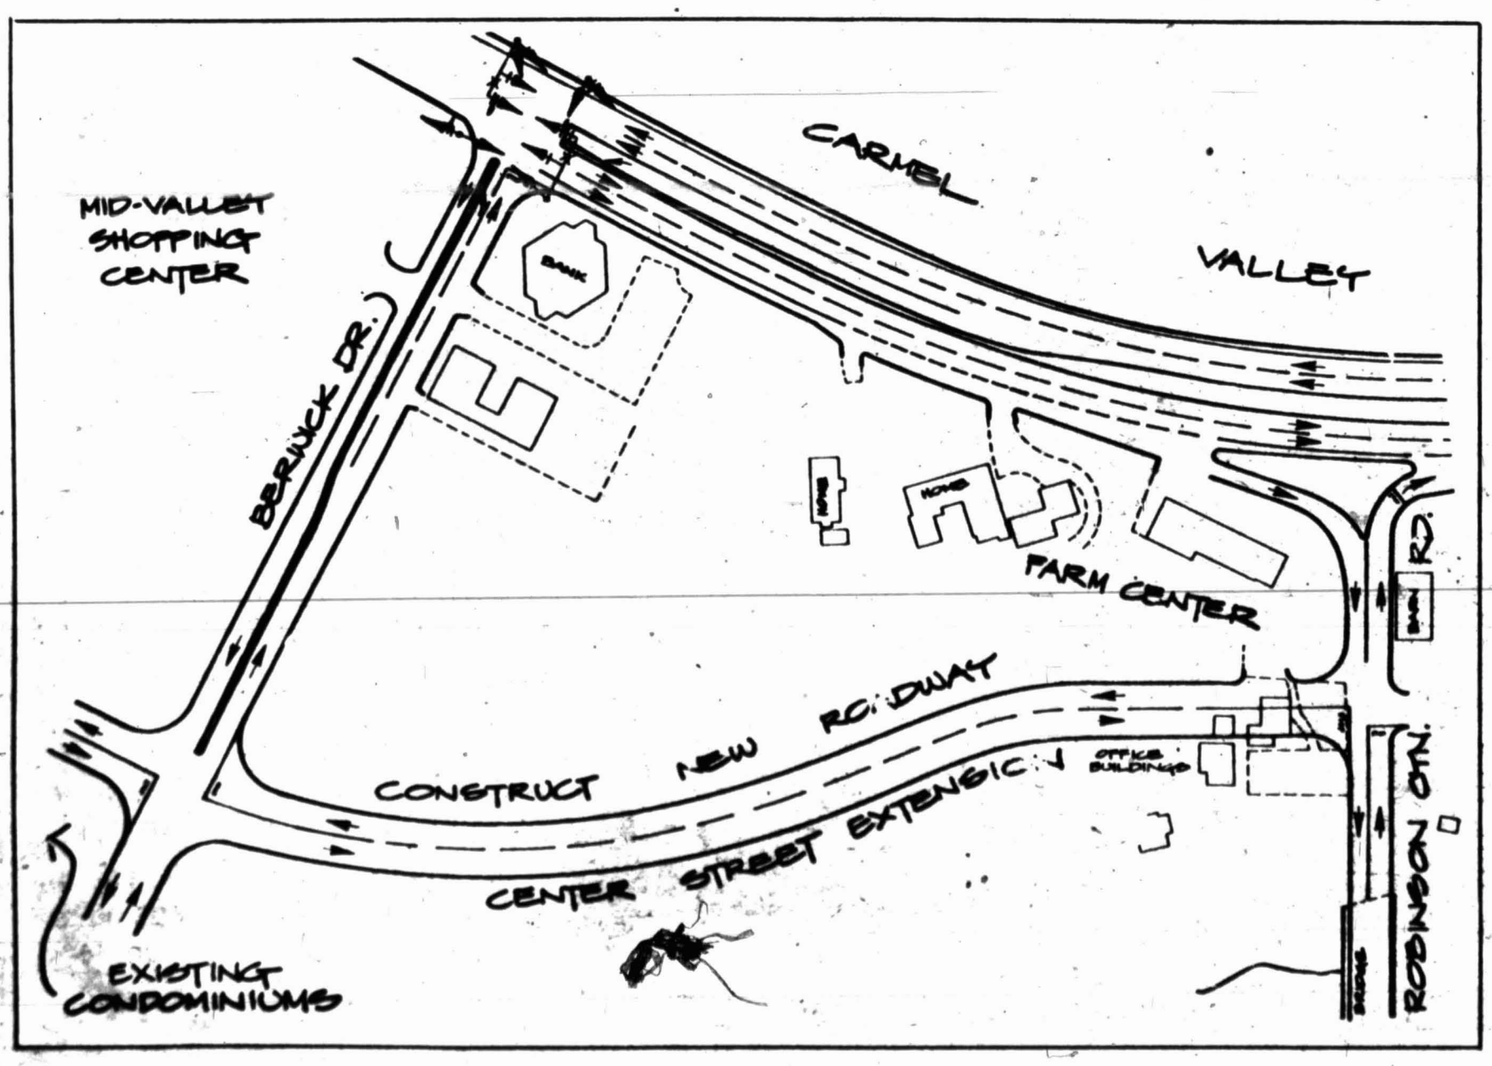
After the meeting, Orrett told this newspaper he could not conceive of an alternative that would avoid an "urban" solution.

"Developing an intersection without signals or a grade separation is not possible in this case," he said. "It's also not possible to build a grade separation that is not urban."

Stanley Kulakow, project manager for Creegan & D'Angelo, told this newspaper that the supervisors "pretty much indicated they don't want anything.

"What they want is a rural solution to an urban situation. "How we'll do that I cannot conceive."





The intersection of Carmel Valley and Robinson Canyon roads as it is today is shown in the map above. Three of the plans to change it are outlined in the maps left and opposite.

Plan brings complaints

Property owners and businessmen have issued a barrage of complaints against plans to improve the intersection of Carmel Valley and Robinson Canyon roads.

Business owners warned the county Board of Supervisors at its May 6 meeting that a new intersection should not hamper access to the Mid Valley Shopping Center.

Property owners put the supervisors on notice they are not willing to provide land for road improvements to accommodate Carmel Valley Ranch development.

Four alternatives for the intersection — including a traffic signal, underpass and extension of Center Street — place a median divider on Carmel Valley Road. Engineers for the developer of Carmel Valley Ranch envision the divider extending past Berwick Drive, cutting off left-turn access into the drive from Carmel Valley Road.

The extension of Center Street from Berwick Drive to Robinson Canyon Road would require a right-of-way through property behind the Farm Center Country Store. It would include a traffic signal at Berwick Drive and Carmel Valley Road.

The underpass or a traffic signal at Robinson Canyon Road intersection would also require encroachment onto private property. A signal there would include widening Carmel Valley Road to five lanes.

Ron Hunter, manager of the Monterey Savings and Loan Association office at Mid-Valley and vice president of the Mid-Valley Merchants Association, urged access to Berwick Drive. He said merchants rely on ready access from Carmel Valley Road.

Sidney Morris, a lawyer representing Ada Roxbury, said the developer's four alternatives would not provide access to his client's antique and pottery shops on Carmel Valley Road. The shops are on the south side of the road, just west of the intersection. The median divider would eliminate direct, left-turn access for westbound traffic on Carmel Valley Road, requiring motorists to make a U-turn to reach the shops.

A signal is unsuitable, Morris said, because it would cause traffic jams at the intersection. He said, "I drive through that intersection twice a day. The traffic is already heavy. A signal will only back it up."

Morris said, "We were promised a quality development at Carmel Valley Ranch. I suggest the developer go back to the drawing board for a better solution to this intersection."

•

JOHN TESTA, who lives on the north side of Carmel Valley Road opposite the intersection, asked if his 1½ acres would be affected.

"I've lived there 18 years, and three times the county has chopped away at my bluff," he said.

Noting that motorists often drive by at 65-70 mph, Testa insisted, "A signal will cause lots of accidents. People will be killed. You'll need six warning signs."

Mo Orrett, supervising civil engineer for the county, informed Testa that part of his property would be needed for the intersection. An underpass might require as much as a 30-foot cut into the bluff, although Orrett said he could not tell Testa exactly how much of his land would be taken.

Installing a signal was opposed by Don Graef, representing the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association. He presented a letter from CVPOA president Earl Moser. The letter noted that a traffic signal would interfere with east-west traffic on Carmel Valley Road and be unsafe because there is a road curve and downhill slope at the intersection.

Among the alternatives, the CVPOA encourages the building of an underpass, Graef said.

Pat Herman, who owns the Farm Center Country Store, was adamant that part of his property not be taken to extend Center Street. He also opposed a signal or an underpass.

"I've been on that corner for 20 years. It's a country corner. We don't need more than some minor improvements to service traffic," Herman said.

"This whole problem is only to accommodate the (Carmel Valley) Ranch," he said.

A hiker's view of new Garland Park land

By STEVE HELLMAN

A GROUP OF 46 residents, hard-core hikers and park officials explored the Condon family addition to Garland Rancho Regional Park May 3.

Park Manager Gary Tate led the hike into Garzas Canyon, at the center of the 630-acre addition acquired from the Condons in April.

The hike started at a gate on Garzas Road. Tate explained that when the addition is opened for public use this summer there will be only limited access into Garzas Canyon from the road. Access to the Condon addition will be through new trails connecting it to the eastern boundary of the park, and the main entrance on Carmel Valley Road.

Reason for the restricted access from Garzas Road is lack of parking and consideration for the residents, Tate said.

Garzas Creek was running full, and a 12-foot wood plank was brought along for stream crossings. Poison oak grew in thick patches in the wooded canyon.

Tate pointed out where a trail will be built on the west side of Garzas Canyon for hiking and equestrian access. The trail will start from the mesa at the east end of the park, drop into Garzas Canyon and join the existing trail along the creek.

The hike included a side trip in Redwood Canyon, a small box canyon that empties into Garzas Creek from the east. Large redwoods, dense growths of ferns and a remote silence are found in the canyon.

The redwoods and Garzas Creek, which had to be crossed 14 times with the plank because of its depth, are unusual features of the park. Most of the park is oak woodlands, grassland and small gullies.

Garzas Creek, with no sight of fish in it, normally slows to a trickle in summer.

The hike was highlighted by an abundance of spring wildflowers, blue lupin, purple clover, yellow poppies, forget-me-nots and wild iris.

Carmel won the first game against Hollister in the 10th inning of a game previously stopped due to darkness. In the second game, Carmel lost in the 10th inning.

Against King City, Mike Wecker threw a superb game, allowing only one hit in seven innings while walking four and striking out four.

David Spear led the team at the plate with three hits — including a triple — scoring three runs, stealing two bases and having one RBI.

Carmel had a double play, with Gary Childs going to shortstop Brent Eagling to first baseman Greg Raynes.

Eagling also had two hits and scored a run. Childs also scored.

•

THE BOYS' VARSITY track team lost its last dual meet before the league championships to North County 25-106. The frosh-soph lost 55-79. But the girls won 55-53 with a win in the final event, the mile relay.

The league championships for track will be held at Hartnell on Friday, May 16.

•

THIS WEEK'S "ATHLETE OF THE WEEK" is Therese Ostrander.

She led the girls' track team by placing first in the shot-put and the discus.

She set school records in the shot-put and the discus, and a legue record in the shot-put with a toss of 39 feet, 2½ inches. Her winning discus throw was 111 feet, 8½ inches.

Miss Ostrander has been offered a scholarship for field hockey at the University of Oregon, but she will probably attend a junior college in Pennsylvania to improve her field hockey and track.

Sanitarian wins award

Mike Paredes, chief operator of the Carmel Sanitary District sewage treatment plant, has received the 1979 annual operators award from the California Water Pollution Control Federation. It is the first time an operator in the Carmel district has won the award. Paredes, 64, came to the sanitary district in 1952 and has been chief operator of the sewage plant nine years. He plans to retire in August. The Monterey Bay Section of the federation nominated him for the award. He was also admitted into the Quarter Century Operators Club of the federation. The federation in January awarded its 1979 annual Plant-of-the-Year trophy to the Carmel sewage treatment plant.

Valley building moratorium lifted...

By STEVE HELLMAN

AFTER THREE YEARS of work on the new Carmel Valley Master Plan and a year-long moratorium on development, only one major obstacle remains to stem the tide of subdivision applications for Carmel Valley.

A lawsuit filed by the City of Carmel and Virginia Merz requests an Environmental Impact Report be prepared for the 20-year Master Plan.

Charging that the 2,500 new housing units allowed under the Master Plan will have an adverse impact on roads, air and water resources, the lawsuit asks that the county Board of Supervisors set aside its adoption of the Master Plan and order an EIR.

Trial hearing on the lawsuit is scheduled for May 21 in Monterey County Superior Court, Salinas.

If the court orders an EIR, it could mean as much as a six-month delay before the county Planning Department begins accepting applications for subdivisions, including single lot-splits.

The Board of Supervisors last week voted to lift the interim ordinance that had halted subdivisions in the Valley since last July.

The moratorium had been clamped on development in the Valley to settle a lawsuit against the county's General Plan. The lawsuit — filed by the City of Carmel and the Carmel Area Coalition, charged that the General Plan did not conform to state law and therefore needed revision.

Supervisors agreed to correct the General Plan and freeze development in the Valley until they adopted and implemented the new Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The Master Plan was approved on Jan. 15, ordinances were passed in April to implement it, and the 29,000-acre valley was rezoned in accordance.

Finishing touches on the Master Plan were expected this month, including the supervisors' appointment of a five-member citizens committee to evaluate and score all subdivision applications.

The Planning Department intends to begin processing the first subdivision applications on June 6 when the development moratorium will expire.

•

LITTLE OPPOSITION WAS expressed last week against the supervisors' decision to lift the moratorium.

Earl Moser, president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, said after the meeting it was his understanding the moratorium was removed to clear the way for the Master Plan implementation.

"It doesn't mean the county's going to grant permits for subdivisions. Developers will have to submit their plans for processing through the Master Plan," said Moser, a member of the citizens committee that worked on the Master Plan.

Carl Hooper of Bestor Engineers told this newspaper the supervisors' action on the moratorium was "a foregone conclusion." He said, "When the supervisors accepted the Master Plan in January it was expected they would lift it."

He disagreed, however, with the county's plan to not accept applications until June 6, and then for only a two-week period.

"The county's going to be overloaded on June 6 with applications when they could have been spread out over this month," he said.

Asked if he expected a tide of applications, Hooper replied: "We have two or three going in, and there are a number from other people."

..but much tighter controls may be on the way

THE LAWSUIT THAT asks for an Environmental Impact Report on the new Carmel Valley Master Plan could bring significantly tighter restrictions to development.

Alexander Henson of Carmel Valley, special counsel to the City of Carmel, said last week an EIR would reveal weak spots in the Master Plan.

The lawsuit asks the county Board of Supervisors to set aside its adoption of the Master Plan, Henson noted, while an EIR is prepared and certified. The supervisors would re-adopt the Master Plan, but not before it is considered in view of findings in an EIR, he said.

"There's definitely a chance the Master Plan will be different than it is today," Henson said.

"Stop-gaps" may be needed to halt development if traffic or air pollution reach unacceptable levels, or if groundwater supplies are threatened by septic tank effluent, said Henson, who served seven years in the state attorney general's environmental unit.

The stop-gaps would be based on prescribed air quality standards, established levels for road traffic and state health standards for groundwater.

Chances of winning the lawsuit are good, Henson said.

An EIR should be ordered by the court because the supervisors wrought last-minute changes in the Master Plan that would intensify development in five ways, he said.

He referred to provisions that the supervisors added to the Master Plan after it was received from the Master Plan Study Committee. The provisions:

- Lift development restrictions on the Odello family's 134 acres of farmland at the mouth of the Valley.
- Designate the planned 175-room Rancho Canada Lodge a conforming use in an area the study committee had intended for permanent open space.
- Delete the reference that all new lodges and hotels should be confined to the three Areas of Development Concentration. Henson said, "Lodges and hotels could be built anywhere in the Valley."
- Allow development of agricultural lands in densities up to one unit per two acres.

"The study committee intended that agricultural lands would not be developed," Henson said.

- Allow "extremely low-density development" in areas of biological significance.

The study committee submitted the Master Plan saying specifically that there be no development in those areas, but the supervisors replaced it with vague language, Henson said.

"Extremely low-density development . . . what does that mean?" he asked.

Tantamount Theater is staying put

By STEVE HELLMAN

OPERATORS OF Tantamount Theater are staying put on Middle Canyon Road in Carmel Valley.

A plan to relocate the 144-seat theater — destroyed by fire in 1978 — on a site east of Carmel Valley Village has been abandoned, according to Rene Sonne.

Delays in acquiring the 7.2-acre parcel and rezoning it from rural residential to commercial led to the decision, Sonne told this newspaper last week.

'The Master Plan killed us.'

Sonne, who represents owner Francois Martin, said he will resume a plan to rebuild the theater on Middle Canyon Road.

Purchase of the land was contingent on rezoning and completing the deal by June, Sonne said. Rezoning required an amendment to the new Carmel Valley Master Plan, and the county was not expected to approve amendments until October.

And there was always the chance, Sonne admitted, rezoning would not be approved.

THE DECISION TO SCRATCH the new site, Sonne insisted, was not based on a petition circulated by residents opposing it.

Wray Hiltabrand and other residents on Valle Vista, which overlooks the 7.2-acre parcel, have been circulating a petition that opposes rezoning to allow the theater.

The parcel is one-half mile east of the Village, on the south side of Carmel Valley Road. Homes on Valle Vista are on a hillside on the north side of Carmel Valley Road.

The petition opposed the commercial rezoning of property surrounded by residential land. It cited the visual impact of a commercial building and parking lot, and said traffic and noise from the theater would be a nuisance.

Hiltabrand told this newspaper last week that more than 200 signatures had been collected. The board of directors of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association voted unanimously last week to support the petition. The petition was to be submitted to the supervisors, Hiltabrand said.

Sonne first indicated his intention to buy the site and relocate the theater after the county imposed restrictions on rebuilding it at its present site.

During a protracted battle with residents along Middle Canyon Road, Sonne acquired a use permit from the county Planning Commission last September to rebuild the theater. A use permit was required because the theater is a legal non-conforming use in the residential neighborhood along Middle Canyon Road.

Residents, insisting they did not wish to completely block reconstruction of the theater, appealed the decision to the supervisors, requesting restrictions on the hours and days of operation. The supervisors agreed to restrict the theater's performances to three nights a week, with 15 days added per year for special shows.

Martin had run the theater since the 1950s on a low-key basis, providing puppet shows and movie classics about twice a week. In recent years, performances had increased to three nights a week, with stage shows.

Sonne insisted the restriction to three nights made the theater economically unfeasible. He then sought the parcel east of the Village where, with commercial rezoning, the theater could have been rebuilt and run without the restrictions.

"The Master Plan killed us," Sonne said of the decision to abandon the new site.

"It's better to have the Tantamount than nothing at all."

Hiltabrand said supporters of the petition did not oppose the theater itself, but simply relocating it in their residential neighborhood.

Sonne said reconstruction of the theater on Middle Canyon Road will begin this summer.

Campaign contributors listed for Fifth District supervisor race

WILLIAM G. Peters of Carmel Valley has received $15,276 in campaign contributions, making his the most heavily-financed candidacy in the Fifth District supervisorial race.

His war chest more than doubles the combined campaign contributions for the four other candidates.

Financial statements filed April 23 with the Monterey County Elections Office show that Peters has received all the money from unnamed contributors.

Total contributions listed by the other candidates are: Neill A. Gardner of Pacific Grove, $3,387; James M. O'Brien of Pebble Beach, $1,877, and Florence Hunter of Pacific Grove, $650. Earl David Thorpe of Monterey listed no contributions.

Peters' contributors each gave less than $100, according to the statement submitted by his treasurer, Joyce Wright. State law requires a candidate to name only contributors of $100 or more.

Peters is chairman of the county Planning Commission, a proponent of the new Carmel Valley Master Plan and the only candidate from Carmel Valley. He told this newspaper the $15,276 was received from more than 350 contributors.

•

GARDNER, a pro-development candidate and former publisher of the Pacific Grove Tribune, received several large contributions from Peninsula businessmen.

His campaign treasurer, Morris Fisher, listed the following $100 contributors: Stephen Magyar, a vice president of Monterey Savings and Loan Association; John Kidwell and John Flatley, retired Pacific Grove businessmen; Wally Getz, a Pacific Grove accountant; Mike Sullivan, a Pacific Grove consultant, and J.E. McEldowney, a Carmel brick mason. W.R. Holman of the Holman's Department Store family also contributed $100 to Gardner.

Gardner also received $200 from Fisher, his campaign treasurer and a vice president of Monterey Savings and Loan Association, and $150 from John Bonnicci, a Pacific Grove motel owner.

O'Brien, an accounts vice president for Paine Webber stock brokers in Monterey, received several contributions from outside Monterey County.

His treasurer, William Bleick, listed $100 contributions from: Charles Picco, a resident of San Diego; William Heyler of Los Angeles, an administrative assistant to the president of Dart Industries of Los Angeles, and George Mahoney of Panorama City, a telephone consultant.

Jane Dart, a Los Angeles housewife, contributed $250 to O'Brien.

Other contributors to O'Brien were: Tom Huston of Pebble Beach, Shirley Meneice of Pebble Beach and Dennis Bryan, a Pebble beach plumbing supplier, $100 each.

Hunter received the bulk of her $650 from the following contributors: Alene Von Harringa of Monterey, $185; Virginia Merz of Carmel, $125; Victoria Gibson of Carmel, $100, and Milton Colburn of Pebble Beach, $100. Hunter is a lawyer and former administrative assistant to Supervisor Sam Farr.

Peters also outspent his opponents by a wide margin during the January-February filing period. He listed expenditures of $5,251, compared to $1,497 for Gardner, $846 for O'Brien, $532 for Hunter and $532 for Thorpe.

The Fifth District covers Carmel, Carmel Valley, Pebble Beach, other portions of the Peninsula and the coast to 15 miles south of Big Sur.

The election is June 3.

Coherent income policy urged

By STANFORD G. ROSS

A MAJOR PROBLEM facing the United States in the 1980s is the construction of a coherent income-security system.

We now have a myriad of unrelated programs, with Social Security as the central feature, that attempt to protect the non-working population, primarily the elderly, disabled and needy families with children. The programs have been created piecemeal over the last 45 years and reflect the pressures of their separate constituencies. Today they need to be viewed together as constituting a single income-security sector of our society and reformed to reflect current economic and social realities.

Relatively few Americans realize that income-security activities — writing checks to provide cash payments to individuals — are the single largest function of government. Roughly one out of four Americans — 55 million people — depend for all, or at least the largest part, of their income on receiving a government check. In essence, the government's overwhelming domestic role is to transfer an amount equal to about 20 percent of our gross national product from the pockets of one group of Americans to those of another.

What are the economic and social effects of this activity? How efficiently and effectively is the job done? We not only lack answers but the issues are barely being addressed. There is almost no accountability to the public in this area because of the fragmented nature of the programs and the lack of focus within the government to identify the issues. We simply do not know whether cash benefits are being distributed fairly or what the consequences of this activity are for the country.

We need to find ways to create an orderly political process to transform government cash-transfer programs into a coordinated income-security system. In particular, this will require new directions for Social Security. Tight limitations will have to be placed upon the future growth of Social Security benefits. Creative means will have to be found to finance the benefit system. Most of all, to carry out a reform agenda successfully, the political processes surrounding Social Security will have to be changed dramatically.

CREATION OF A CABINET-LEVEL Department of Income Security could be an important starting point. Income-security activities need political identification to alert the public to the issues.

A new Department of Income Security would provide a government-wide focus to build new policies and allow full accountability to the American people. What is now the least-understood function of government would be highlighted by the very process of creating a separate department. Further, once established, this agency would be able to carry the message of the need for greater individual and collective responsibility to the people.

Most important, a broadly constituted department could lead to the building of broader constituencies that would counteract the special-interest forces that surround our fragmented programs.

A Department of Income Security would alert many groups to the stake they have in these programs and multiply the constituencies to which these programs answer. Taxpayers, business organizations and professional groups that have not had a sufficiently significant influence on the shaping of these programs could contribute to the process of reforming them.

It is undoubtedly inadvertent, but it is shocking that we know so little about a major phenomenon that is destined to grow dramatically in the years ahead and will be critical to the quality of life in this country. It is clear that in an era of inflation and limited economic growth we need to restructure these programs to target resources more intelligently. For only if we do so is it possible to make progress to eliminate poverty, increase private savings to supplement Social Security, improve the management of expenditure programs and reduce the amount of wasteful government bureaucracy.

We must get on with this task.

(Stanford G. Ross, who was commissioner of Social Security in 1978 and 1979, is a lawyer.)

Nonagenarian opens supra-realistic show May 17

Creating Worlds as They Would Be is the title of a one-man show of supra-realism works by Chesley Bonestell that will open Saturday, May 17 at the Gallery Who's Who in Art, Lincoln and Sixth, Carmel. Everyone is welcome to meet the artist at a reception in his honor Saturday from 2-4 p.m.

Born in 1888, Chesley Bonestell has applied his studies in architecture, art and astronomy to works that have been termed "astronomical art." Bonestell studied architecture to please his grandfather who wished to channel "that bohemian streak" into a respectable and productive field.

Graduating from Columbia University in 1911, he worked as a designer for many of the leading architects, then moved to Europe to work and study for a few years.

As a matte artist, he worked for all the major motion picture companies. Some of the memorable films to receive the Bonestell touch are Citizen Kane, The Hunchback of Notre Dame and War of the Worlds.

At the end of World War II, Bonestell was introduced to Wernher von Braun. This meeting resulted in a series of articles on space travel with illustrations by Bonestell that appeared in Life magazine.

Long an admirer of Chinese paintings, Bonestell enjoys them because, he says, the Chinese ignore reality and use imagination to create scenes you never see on earth."

Bonestell says that he paints in the "spirit of times and places — creating worlds as they would be and applying meticulous realism to a leap of imagination to produce supra-realistic paintings with a haunting mystique."

The works of Chesley Bonestell may be viewed thrugh May 31 each Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m-5 p.m. and Sunday from 11-4.

For more information, phone 625-0724.

Super-realistic

Rickerson exhibit to open

The second annual one-man show of works by Mark Rickerson will open with an artist's reception Saturday, May 17 at Miner's Gallery Americana, Lincoln and Sixth, Carmel. Everyone is welcome to meet the artist from 4-7 p.m.

Rickerson's new show will be dominated by the super-realistic outerspace themes that have brought him recognition though he has added a new dimension to his work.

Living and painting in the Hawaiian Islands for the past 10 years, Rickerson has been influenced by the brilliance of the tropical flora of the islands. The new show of works will include his interpretations of the vastness of space coupled with larger-than-life renderings of tropical flowers.

Working in his photo-realistic style, Rickerson combines the precision of this technique with his eye for color and flow.

Rickerson says of his work: "You can look at one of these paintings and feel yourself floating. I remember when the astronauts were in space the distances were so great, the quiet was so intense that they expressed in awestruck reverence, an almost spiritual emotion about being out there; this is the mood I strive to convey in my work."

His works may be viewed through June 14 from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. daily.

For more information, phone 624-5071.

JUPITER,* A PHOTO-REALISTIC painting, is an example of the outer space theme works for which Mark Rickerson has gained recognition. However, Rickerson, a 10-year resident of the Hawaiian Islands, has been influenced by the brilliance of the tropical flora of the islands. The second annual one-man show of his works opening Saturday, May 17 will include renderings of both subject matter including the larger-than-life painting titled Red Rose. The artist will attend a reception in his honor Saturday from 4-7 p.m.

RED ROSE, a photo-realistic painting by Hawaiian artist Mark Rickerson is included in his second annual one-man show of works opening Saturday, May 17 at Miner's Gallery Americana, Lincoln and Sixth, Carmel. Everyone is welcome to meet the artist from 4-7 p.m.

AN INHABITED PLANET illuminated by a binary, one yellow and one blue* is the title of an oil painting by supra-realistic painter Chesley Bonestell that is included in a one-man show of his works opening Saturday, May 17 at the Gallery Who's Who in Art, Lincoln and Sixth, Carmel. Everyone is welcome to meet the artist at a reception in his honor from 2-4 p.m.

The wine connoisseur

Distinguished brandies require careful distilling

by ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

JUST AS THERE has always been among winelovers something we might call "the search after claret," to borrow a title from a 17th-century tipling philosopher and poetaster, there has equally been a "search after cognac."

The stumbling blocks to discovery can involve a mistaken approach as easily as an inadvertent detour can make an unwary tourist lost in a wilderness. There is a beginning for everything. In the appreciation of fine brandies, which has the great cognacs at the top, such understanding is essential for a successful "search after cognac."

Brandy can come from anywhere, not only from France, but it should be a spirit distilled from wine. Cognac is also a spirit distilled from wine, but made in the Charente district of France. Grande Champagne Cognac, or Fine Champagne Cognac closes the focus to the spirits made in the chalky soil area known as the Grande Champagne in the Charente because that earth so resembles the terrain of the ancient province to the north, which includes Reims and Epernay, where sparkling wines are made. A champ is field, a treeless space, deriving from the Roman word campus.

The territory of the Cognac region is officially subdivided into seven classifications, according to the nature of the soil:

1. Grande Champagne 2. Petite Champagne 3. Borderies 4. Fins Bois 5. Bons Bois 6. Bois Ordinaires 7. Bois Communs.

•

BRANDIES DISTILLED from white wines grown exclusively in the Grande Champagne area are so designated in their titles. When blended with 50 percent of the distillations from the Petite Champagne, these brandies may be called Fine, or Grande Fine Champagne Cognac. Blends including aged brandies from the remaining areas are entitled to be called Cognac.

As recently stated here, some of the finest brandies of France come from such distinguished houses as Hennessy, Martell, Courvoisier, Remy Martin, Hine, Bisquit, Camus and Delamain, who believe that the findings in aged spirits from more than two regions, such as the Grande Champagne and Petite Champagne, are needed to produce the most subtle and complex brandy, hence may only bear the title of Cognac.

The giving way to initials . . . VS for "Very Special" VSOP for "Very Special Old Pale," etc. Napoleon may suggest to the unsophisticated that it is from the era of that history-making warrior-emperor, but the compliment carries no age decree for the brandy any more than Bonaparte armagnac was distilled in the time of the little corporal.

One of our readers near Denver wrote us that it must be a "fairy tale" that an old cognac bottled in a Baccarat decanter brought that distinguished crystal almost for free because it came into the country merely as a bottle, not taxed as anything more than a container. But it's true! One should look, however, to the spirit in the bottle. Needless to say, any French Cognac house is only going to put some of its finest product into such illustrious packaging.

•

CURRENTLY, ONE OF THE FINEST brandies we've ever tasted is coming from Jas. Hennessy & Co. titled Paradis Cognac. It is a blending of about 60 cognacs, including some from pre-Phylloxera vines of the Charente. About 95 percent of this blending would derive from the first three appelations, of Grande Champagne, Petite Champagne and the Borderies, consequently warranting only a Cognac title.

It's a $100 bottle of brandy, available in very limited supply, all of it coming from the reserve cellars of the Hennessy family, which successive generations since the founding in 1765 called Le Paradis. It is the perfect example of our thesis that sometimes the finest French Cognacs carry only a Cognac appellation. The more exclusive caption of Grande Champagne or Fine Champagne can be a guideline to quality, but not the bottom line. Martell, in its long history, has never released anything but Cognac designations, in the firm belief that a well-balanced brandy needs more than two regional sources.

It takes ten casks of white wine to be distilled down to one cask of brandy. The crystal-clear spirit emerging from the pot stills gains its golden color from age in oaken casks and barrels. There is also much as eight to ten percent evaporation in the early years. The artistry of finesse for the final product comes with the final blending.

It has embraced a special care for (1) the wine source for the distillate, being tart, clean, high total acid white wine (2) the composition of the still, in France only beaten copper pot-stills of primitive design (3) the operation of those stills, fired steadily (4) age and (6) reduction to 80 degrees proof with distilled water.

•

NO ONE HAS EVER BEEN ABLE TO PIN DOWN why it is so, but the biggest and best brandy market in USA is Wisconsin.

The leader in sales there is the Christian Brothers California Brandy.

Alfred Fromm, originally from Bingen, a German wine and brandy expert, along with Brother Timothy as winemaster, brought distinction to our American distillation of brandywine.

In this brandy wrap-up, we'd be less than sincere if we did not give more than a passing nod to the XO Rare Reserve Brandy of the Christian Brothers (about $10). It is rich, mellow, soft and fine.

Stealing a march into popular favor now, for its outstanding value and smoothness is E&J California Brandy ($6.50).

Becoming a brandy fancier is not an overnight accomplishment. Happily, once opened, most good brandies and cognacs will keep without deteriorating for a long enough time, even months. However, those expensive XO bottlings like Paradis, or the Martell Extra, with some portions of the blending being more than 100 years old, should be consumed in weeks, rather than months after opening.

Theatre review

College Players' perform superbly

By MARC RIVETTE

ONE OF THE BIGGEST and best bargains around is the Monterey Peninsula College Players' presentation of Stop the World — I Want to Get Off. If something inexpensive makes you think shoddy or slapdash, disregard that idea. With a copy of the play's newspaper advertisement, two can get in for the price of one. And the present production at the Monterey Peninsula College Theatre is worth five times every penny of it.

Playwright and composer Anthony Newley is a man who was way before his time, though he is now coming into his own. This show is musical comedy, and yet it is not — it is funny, yet provocative and touching.

When the orchestra, conducted by Greg Janusz, strikes up the overture, there is that excitement of an opening night. It is a joy to hear a full-sounding orchestra, all too rare these days.

When the audience arrives, the curtain is open on a bare stage except for rows of bleachers. A nubile chorus of eight maidens begins with the A.B.C. Song after a bit of pantomime and the show is off and running. The nubiles are: Nicole Duffel, Paula Dula, Jessamyn Fase, Sandy Patrick, Debbie Robinson, Kelly Schramm, Audrey Swanson and Diane Trovato.

It would be consistent with my impression of Newley that he would write a play wherein he plays the only man. Littlechap is a randy clown who is content with the chorus until Evie shows up. She is the only woman who initially is not a pushover. Intrigued, he takes out after her, gets her pregnant and marries her.

She is the boss's daughter. One of the most hilarious bits is that his father-in-law is played by the sound of a trombone. Inevitably, a daughter is born, Susan, played by Jennifer Viereck. Soon there is a second daughter, played by Donelle Andrews. With each birth, the Boss-trombone gives Littlechap a promotion that takes him travelling.

In Russia, he meets Anya who gives him a son, played by Joe Laborn, and named simply, Boy. Then the household hires a German maid, Ilse. Finally, Littlechap is sent to American where his conquest is Ginnie.

•

THE SUCCESS of the play sits on the shoulders of Littlechap, played by Andy Philpot, and Evie. One of the things that every theater-goer thrills to is to be in on the flowering of a young talent. From the moment Philpot steps out on stage in his whiteface clown makeup, he dominates.

It is no easy part, for he is constantly on stage singing. His is a pleasant voice, but unless someone takes him in hand to help with voice projection, he might well end up ruining it. This is not to say that he was not always heard, but the strain was there. Philpot's handling of the Newley, almost cockney, accent is skillful throughout.

LaVonne Rae Andrews has to manage the quadruple part of Evie-Anya-Ilse-Ginnie, and this is probably the supreme triumph of the show. It is not only a matter of changing accents and wigs, but she seems to change physically for each part. Her Ilse was a sugar-coated Nazi, and her Ginnie was very near to Marilyn Monroe. What an actress, and singer also.

About the only carp of the evening was the conductor letting his orchestra overpower the voices, particularly in the case of Andy Philpot.

Peter DeBono's direction was deft and skillful as usual.

Do not miss this one!

$2,000 prize offered in playwriting competition

The city of Carmel will award a prize of $2,000 for an original, unproduced full-length play or musical as part of its fourth annual Festival of Firsts playwriting competition and the possible production of the prize winner at one of the city's theaters.

An outdoor theater, the Forest Theater was opened in 1910 by a group of playwrights and actors including writers Robinson Jeffers and stage artist Dame Judith Anderson who participated in performances here. Jack London's only play, The First Poet, was seen at this outdoor setting.

The Sunset Center, the cultural arm of the city, also has an indoor theater, Sunset Theater, where there are continual performances throughout the year.

Carmel will accept scripts for this year's competition through August 30. All scripts must be accompanied by a cast list and synopsis. No loose scripts will be accepted.

Scripts should be mailed to: Mr. Richard Tyler, director, Sunset Center, P.O. Box 5066, Carmel, Calif. 93921.

If you wish the script returned, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

'Divas of the Golden West' comes to the Conference Center

Divas of the Golden West, an evening of theater in the grand tradition of California's Gold Rush era, will be staged Tuesday, May 20 by the Mother Lode Troupe at the Steinbeck Forum of the Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey. Curtain is at 8 p.m.

All the rigors and hilarity of trouping in the mining camps are brought to life with genteel parlour ballads, arias and duets wrapped in down-to-earth humor by a cast of four.

Corrine Swall, coloratura soprano, wrote and directs the production. She has appeared as soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra and the San Francisco Symphony. She was star of the Carre Theatre, Amsterdam, sang leading roles with the Los Angeles Civic Light Opera, and has been a member of the American Conservatory Theatre.

The cast also includes Monterey's Linda Purdy, past winner of the Metropolitan Opera Regional Auditions. A mezzo soprano, Linda has appeared as soloist with the Los Angeles Sinfonia Orchestra, the Monterey and Modesto symphonies, and the Carmel Bach Festival. She has made six recordings for the Niscience Foundation of Glendale.

Monroe Kanouse is the troupe's pianist-conductor. He has conducted six years with the San Francisco Opera Theatre, and was the first recipient of the Kurt Herbert Adler award. Bass-baritone Marvin Klebe is founder of the Cinnabar Theatre, director of the Marin Opera Company, and has appeared as soloist with the Oakland and Mexico symphony orchestras, and with San Francisco's Western Opera Theatre.

The "Divas of the Golden West" is the second event in the Monterey Conference Center Art Commission's Spring Performing Arts Series. Tickets at $8 will be on sale at the Conference Center, Bartlett's Music in Carmel and at Lily Walker Records and Music in Pacific Grove.

The Music Corner

Recital displayed abundant talents

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

IN THE FIRST HALF of his Monterey Peninsula College recital last Saturday night, pianist Natan Brand allowed only hints of the brilliant imagination and musicianly authority with which he would ignite Pictures at an Exhibition.

The young Israel-born and New York-trained artist catapulted the famous Mussorgsky pageant into a spectacle of such sensation as to force comparison with Sviatoslav Richter's legendary 1958 performance in Bulgaria.

With an instrument that was short of potential and satisfactory repair, Brand made room for the full arsenal of his technique and filled the Music Hall with a non-stop combination of singing lyricism, vivid dynamics, ringing sonorities and thundering and often steely percussions. His range of colors and effects was kaleidoscopic, and he deployed them with high-flying theatrics, whispered tenderness and awesome power.

He also contained this rainbow according to the wide measure of taste that fits the piece and its pictorial images. He made the Gnome creepy, the Old Castle brooding and thoughtful, the ox cart menacing, Samuel Goldberg stentorious and Schmuyle wheedling. He made the Limoges market into a brilliant flurry; the Catacombs were strangely eerie over loud droning chords; Baba Yaga was mysterious but bright and the Great Gate at Kiev was heaven-storming. The Promenade theme was a different set of colors with every hearing and was all church bells at the work's opening and again at the finale.

Brand is an abundantly talented musician, and he brought unashamed personal involvement, illustrated with thoughtful introspections and surprising dynamic contrasts, as though he knew Mussorgsky personally. His reading was one of the finest concert moments this season.

Brand began his program with the six Moments Musicaux by Schubert. While the full range of keyboard technique was at least alluded to, the music was given more color and variety than it needs. The percussive effects were especially conspicuous, particularly in the No. 5 in B Minor. And overall Brand played these miniatures as though they were profound and deeply felt, the result being a mismatch of stylistic appropriateness.

IN THE CHOPIN Sonata No. 2 in B-flat Minor, the effects displayed in the Schubert were added to by increased power, greater percussion and tempestuousness.

A stormy cloudburst abruptly ended the brooding introduction to the first movement with percussive explosions punctuating the bracing bluster. The scherzo was angry and aggressive. The famous funeral march of the third movement was played with the restless disquiet of fresh grief. The song-like center was singing and healthy. But the forcefulness of the march's repeat, not unlike its character at first, began to take on the quality of Verdian vengeance.

The final movement was high-speed moodiness, relentless rush and declamatory arrival.

Chopin is on record somewhere as being envious of the physical power of some of his pianistic colleagues. With Brand we witnessed great power, though this sonata has other shades and sensitivities than were accounted for.

After Pictures, the last event on the program, Brand returned (too soon to allow his audience to recover) and served a Chopin Nocturne as an encore.

Scott MacClelland is classical music director for KWAV-FM 96.9

Moss Hart comedy to open at Studio Theatre

The Man Who Came to Dinner, Moss Hart's and George Kaufman's sophisticated comedy about the disruptive intrusion of a radio personality on the homelife of a smalltown couple, will be staged for opening performances Friday through Sunday, May 16-18 at the Studio Theatre/Restaurant, Carmel. Confined to a wheelchair in the Stanley home, Whiteside invites a parade of personalities into their house that include Albert Einstein and Harpo Marx.

Directed by Marina Curtis, The Man Who Came to Dinner stars Jim Webber as Sheridan Whiteside; Florence Mason as Nurse Preen; Pat Horsley as Maggie Cutler, his secretary; and Tom Bender as a small town editor Bert Jefferson. The cast also includes Jan Williamson, Arthur Montgomery, and Nita Raichart.

The play will be regularly staged each Thursday through Sunday until June 21.

"There is nothing which has yet been contrived by man by which so much happiness is produced as by a good tavern or inn." --BOSWELL

RUSH HOUR on Main Street in the village of Kersey has changed little through the ages. The charming village is included in a comprehensive tour of Great Britain in England, Scotland and Wales, the final Explorama travel-adventure film of the current series. Screenings are scheduled at 8:15 p.m. Thursday and Friday, May 15-16 at Sunset Theater, Carmel.

British Isles to be featured in Sunset Center travelogue

England, Scotland and Wales, the final film in the 1979-80 Explorama travel-adventure series, will be screened Thursday and Friday, May 15-16 at 8:15 p.m. in Sunset Theater. Producer Kenneth Richter will personally narrate the program.

Six months' shooting on location in Great Britain has captured views of England through the ages, from mysterious Stonehenge to Queen Elizabeth opening Parliament and the timeless charm of England's country villages.

The film opens with a voyage across the English Channel to Dover and proceeds to take the viewer from the circles and barrows of Kent to Stonehenge, Hadrian's Wall and the Tower of London. Medieval York and Westminster Abbey are visited before turning to Wales and its great castles, Conway, Caernarvon and Harlech.

At Cambridge, the camera visits Kings College and its famous chapel, Emmanuel College and John Harvard's lodgings.

Stone-grinding flour in a 16th century watermill, the Cotswolds, half-timbered houses in Lavenham and traditional weaving techniques are all explored, as is Shakespeare's birthplace, Stratford-on-Avon.

The Isle of Skye and its crofters and weavers are included, as is a stunning autumnal tour of Scotland, including Edinburgh Castle, Holyrood Palace, the wild valley of Glencoe and Culloden Moor.

The comprehensive travelogue also includes shipbuilding at Newcastle, Devonshire villages, the new face of London (and the old), and a look at Britain's early railroads.

Tickets, at $4.50, are available at Macy's, Del Monte Center, Monterey and Abinante Music, Alvarado Street, Monterey.

Hartnell String Chamber Orchestra to perform

The Hartnell College String Chamber Orchestra will present a program of baroque and classic favorites Sunday, May 18 at 3 p.m. in the college Performing Arts Recital Hall, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas. Gary Beswick, music director of the chamber orchestra and members of his family will be guest soloists.

The orchestra will perform the "Lark" String Quartet by Haydn. The next three selections are well-known baroque masterpieces for solo strings.

The Viola Concerto in B Minor by Handel will present Gary David Beswick as viola soloist. He is the fourth son of music director Gary Beswick. Gary David has been chosen by the Monterey Musicians Association, Local 616 to attend the International Congress of Strings this summer on the University of Washington campus. Sponsored by the musician's union and the Associated Students of Hartnell College, he will undergo eight weeks of intensive training and performance with nationally known musicians.

J.S. Bach's Double Concerto in D Minor will bring music director Beswick and concertmistress Karen Lenker together as violin soloists. Dr. Vahe Aslanian, director of the Hartnell Chorus, will conduct the chamber orchestra.

Tim Beswick, eldest son of the director, will play solo violin in the Chaconne by Tommaso Vitali. A graduating senior with a major in music at San Jose State University, Tim is the winner of the Soloist with Orchestra competition at S.J.S.U.

There is no charge for admission to the concert. For additional information, phone Hartnell College; 1-758-8211.

Young riders to display skills at Annual Pony Club Horse Show

The 22nd annual Pebble Beach Pony Club Horse Show will find young riders astride mounts performing English riding movements Sunday, May 18 at the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center. Everyone is welcome to attend the competition from 9 a.m.-5 p.m.; there is no charge.

Nearly 60 riders, ages 5-21, direct their horses in equestrian movements ranging from lead line classes for the youngest riders to advance dressage competitions.

Other events include the jumper classes; pairs class, with riders judged for the precision riding; family class, similar to pairs, in which an adult rides with one or more children; and hunt team class that requires three riders to jump fences, one behind the other, until the final jump which is taken three abreast. (Manner, way of going and teamwork are judged.)

The final competition of the day determines the equitation championship. First and second place winners of other class events compete. At the judges' discretion, the youngsters change horses and are directed to walk, trot, canter and other special exercises.

Judges are Julie Bradley of Santa Ynez and Ellen Osbourne of Carmel Valley.

The Equestrian Center is located adjacent to Collins Polo Field. Though there is no charge, the $4-per-car gate fee into Pebble Beach will be in effect.

For further information, phone Tina Farr at 659-4035.

Junior golfers to compete Saturday

One of the world's first Pulse Putt-Ams is scheduled for action in Monterey soon. Planned in conjunction with the Coors Carmel Classic, the Putt-Am is scheduled at Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club, Saturday, May 17, at 10 a.m.

Using only Pulse Putters, junior golfers from the Monterey/Salinas area will team up with players from the Women's Professional Golf Tour to compete in a 9-hole putting contest. Putts will range from five feet to 20 feet and will use three tees in an effort to equalize distances for the following age groups: 12 years old and under — (red tees); 13-15 years old — (white tees); 16-18 years old and pros — (blue tees). The team with the highest total of holed putts will be declared the winner and will receive putters as the first place prize.

Parker Smith, nationally known golf columnist, is originator of the idea for Pulse Putters. "Teaming the youngsters with the WPGT pros adds a special touch that the kids really enjoy," he said.

"Pulse is interested in programs for junior golfers and professionals alike," continued Smith. "Combining them makes it unique — the kids get to meet the pros firsthand and actually compete with them. In addition, it gives junior golf programs a chance to raise some funds."

The Carmel Valley Golf & Country Club is on Valley Greens Drive, 3½ miles east of Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road. For further information, phone 624-2779.

AN IMPROVED HIGH SCHOOL

A little over two years ago, voters of Carmel were largely instrumental in defeating a $220,000 bond issue for the Monterey Union High School. They cast 168 ballots against the bonds, to 50 for.

Carmel's reasons for defeating the bonds were unsatisfactory conditions in both the school board and the school personnel. There was no question of the need for the improvements in the plant, but it was believed that until such time as the influence exercised by Superintendent John H. Graves in high school affairs should be eliminated, the improvements could wait. Now things are different. Superintendent Graves has resigned. A Carmelite, Mrs. Hester Schoeninger, has been elected to the board of trustees prompting Carmel's reversal of its negative vote for the bonds.

CARMEL HOMESITES

$8,000—Two choice lots on Scenic Drive with a beautiful unobstructed view of the ocean.

$3,000—Three beautifully wooded lots in Carmel Woods approximating a frontage of 225 feet.

$5,000—Approximately one-third of an acre in Deven Heights. A fine homesite with a beautiful view.

BASS ARE CAUGHT ON CARMEL BEACH

Anglers are reminded that bass fishing in the ocean surf is now coming into its own this season. Already a number of fine fish have been taken at Carmel's front door. Ernie Schweninger and Ralph Condon are two Carmelites who have been making the most of the early fishing on the beach near the point.

So far more fish are being taken in the surf with casting tackle than there have been in any of the sloughs or river mouths nearby.

"TWELFTH NIGHT" OR "SALOME"? TRYOUTS WILL DETERMINE FOREST THEATER PRODUCTION

It's either Twelfth Night or Salome. Torn between his desire to stage another Shakespeare play in the Forest Theater this summer and his hope of putting on a play that would be sure to pay expenses, Herbert Heron is still undecided which to do. So he is going to try an experiment. On Thursday evening he will hold try-outs for Twelfth Night and on Friday evening he will hold try-outs for Salome.

If the material available for actors, crowds, and the men and women needed to make up a good production staff, plus enthusiasm, work out best for Twelfth Night, that will be the choice. If Salome shows more promise, that play will be staged.

PARENT NURSERY SCHOOL WANTS TO TAKE OVER BAY

A possible solution to the problem of what to do about Bay School, which has concerned the Highlands Association and the Carmel Unified School District for the past two weeks, is offered in the proposal that has been made to the superintendent, Stuart Mitchell, that Bay School be turned over to the use of the Carmel Parent Nursery School, which at present is occupying the basement of the Carmel Youth Center.

Superintendent Mitchell notified the parents of the 11 students attending Bay, located between Carmel and Point Lobos on the inlet at the mouth of San Jose Creek, of the school district trustees' proposal to close the school. The sentimental attachment of the area residents is strong for the little school, which is one of the oldest in the state and one of the few remaining one-room country school houses. Its fate will be determined at the school board meeting next week.

Film Society screens Truffaut film next week

Two Monterey Peninsula motion picture premieres, Woyzeck, directed by Werner Herzog, and Francois Truffaut's The Green Room, are planned by the Monterey Peninsula Film Society. Woyzeck will screen Friday and Saturday, May 16-17; The Green Room will be shown Tuesday and Wednesday, May 20-21. All shows begin at 8:15 p.m. in the S.F.B. Morse Auditorium, 440 Van Buren St., Monterey.

Woyzeck is a caustic tragedy of an ordinary man's headlong plunge into madness and murder. In the title role, Klaus Kinski delivers a harrowing and unforgettable performance, as stark and unsentimental as the razor with which the hero carries out his chilling destiny.

Eva Mattes won Best Supporting Actress for her role in Woyzeck at the 1979 Cannes Film Festival.

Written in 1836 by Georg Buchner, Woyzeck represents one of the most extraordinary events in the history of literature. The drama anticipates by some 50-100 years such literary movements as Naturalism, Expressionism, the Theater of Cruelty and the Theater of the Absurd.

A Newsweek reviewer declared, "Herzog's film is much better than any staged Woyzeck I have seen, and in Klaus Kinski he has found the perfect embodiment of Buchner's tragic hero."

Woyzeck is in German with English subtitles.

In The Green Room, writer-director Truffaut confronts death, a subject that has always fascinated him. In the film, set 10 years after World War I, Truffaut stars as a man overcome with remorse at having survived the war in which so many of his comrades were killed. His grief is compounded by the recent death of his beloved wife. Believing that the dead survive only in the memories of the living, he builds a shrine to them, becoming so obsessed with maintaining the memories of his loved ones that he excludes himself from human relationships.

Truffaut based his film on the writings of Henry James. Co-starring are Nathalie Baye and Jean Daste. The Green Room is in French with English subtitles.

Admission is $3 general, $2.50 for students and seniors and $2 for film society members.

The film society is a non-profit organization dedicated to bringing landmark films to the Monterey Peninsula. For further information, phone 659-4795.

For Over 100 Years The Salvation Army Has Cared for Children

Since it began work in America in 1880, The Salvation Army has served children.

In 1890, the Army opened its first nursery to care for the children of poor parents.

Today, over 250,000 youngsters benefit from salvation Army services.

They go to camp in the summertime.

They spend their after-school hours at a nearby Salvation Army center.

Some receive tutorial help.

Others become skilled at sports or arts and crafts.

In Sunday School, they learn the great truths of the Bible.

Music lessons, Scout troops, and day camping are offered.

All of these activities are supervised by the men and women in Salvation Army blue whose first concern is for the child's character development.

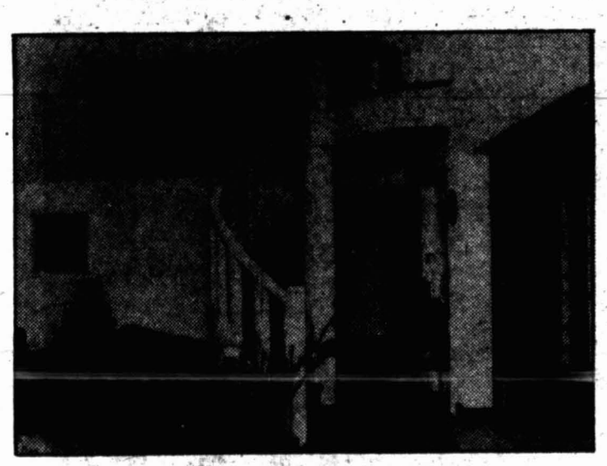
The Continental Connection

There's more than a touch of Belgian tradition about the house at 12th and Casanova. A low, irregular plaster wall surrounds the entire lot, with occasional planter boxes built in, a sturdy gateway at the front, and here and there an arched doorway to a hidden patio.

In front, there's an adobe paved courtyard with a lovely decorated pool. The eaves swing low over countless redwood casements, and the roofs rise steeply past 2 heavy chimneys and around turrets and various projections that make interesting little nooks inside.

A small stained glass window decorates the front door, which opens to a small entrance hall. Just ahead is the large, white domed living room: a tiled fireplace on your left, a coiled stairway rising in the opposite corner, large multi-paned windows flooding in light. Just under the stair, you step up to a central corridor, off which are 2 sizeable, well lighted bedrooms with eccentric ceilings. One has a private entrance to 12th Street, and between the two is the main bath with rustic wood walls and fixtures.

The third bedroom is up the stair, a unique chamber with slanting alcove ceiling and a great window to the west. A tiny bath - neat, compact, complete-adjoins this.



Back downstairs, the dining room is also a step above the living room. Beyond it is the surprisingly roomy European country kitchen, a true center of family living. There's a tiny iron stove at the center, tile wall above the range and butcher block cabinets, sink and blue cabinets on the far wall. A charming, turreted breakfast area, surrounded by 5 windows, projects toward the corner.

There's a service porch just behind the kitchen, with laundry space and copious closet areas. And finally, a small rear deck with doors from the service porch and second bedroom. A charmingly European house, beautifully located in Carmel. $325,000.

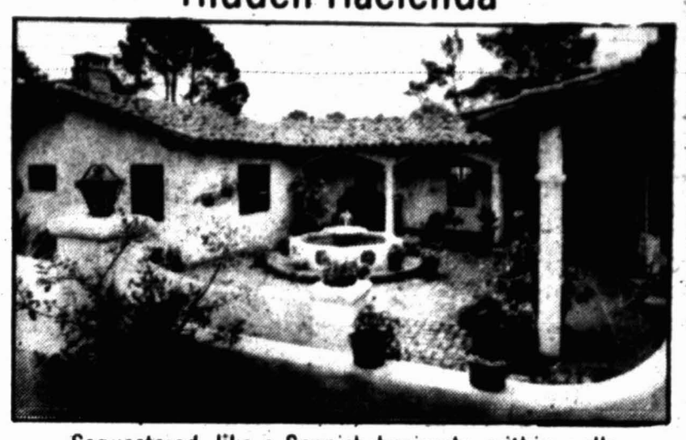
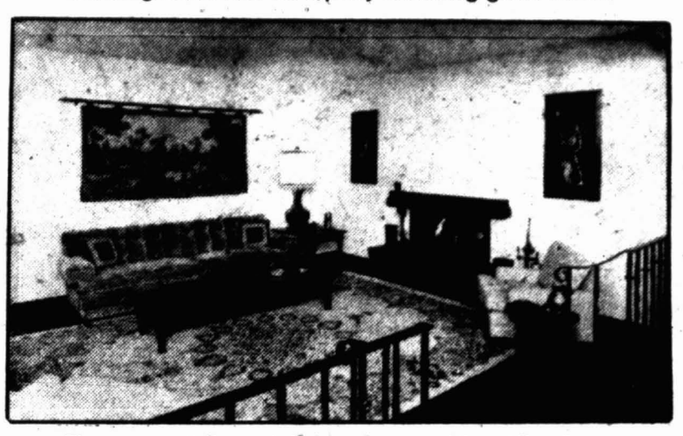
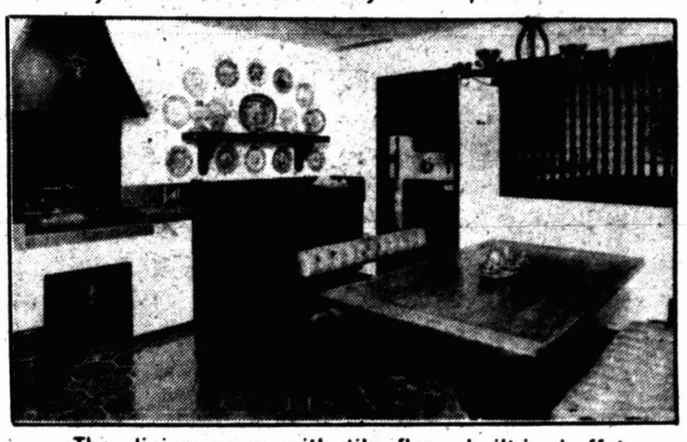
Hidden Hacienda



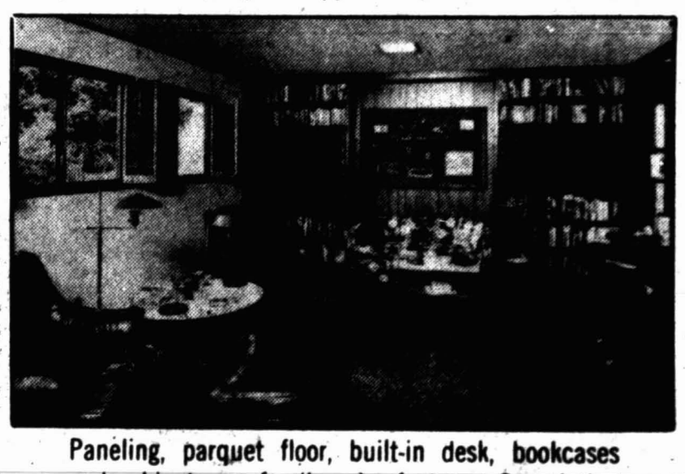
Sequestered, like a Spanish hacienda, within walls enclosing their large, sunny site at the end of a Carmel cul-de-sac, also built about a brick-paved, colonnaded courtyard with a fountain, are this enchanting home and an equally charming guest house.



The parquet-floored living room, with a fireplace, is separated by wrought iron railings from a hallway off the tile-floored entry with a powder room.



The dining room, with tile floor, built-in buffet and metal-hooded fireplace, has a spindled grille through which is glimpsed a paneled breakfast room off the tile-floored kitchen with custom cabinets, tile counters, topline appliances, microwave oven.



Paneling, parquet floor, built-in desk, bookcases and cabinets are family room features. Completing the main house are a carpeted bedroom, an adjacent bath dressing area, also an adaptable hobby center and dark room area and laundry/utility room with a pantry, wall safe, storage cabinets and access to a double garage with electrically controlled door.

Off one of the courtyard's pillared porticoes, the guest house has a living room with fireplace, also a bedroom and bath. Central vacuum, floodlighting and security systems, two furnaces and water heaters, and insulation, are among many amenities adding to livability in this romantic home. $435,000.
